A Prussian Victory—The Town of Weissenburg Taken by Assault—Heavy Fighting—The French Leader Killed—The Crown Prince at the Head of the German Forces—Particulars of the Battle.

CARLSRUHE, Aug. 4—6½ P. M.—There was hard fighting at Weissenburg, yesterday. To-day a large force of Prussians advanced between Weissenbourg and Lauterbourg, ten miles into French territory, driving the advanced posts of the enemy, and destroying miles of the railroad between Lauterbourg and Strasbourg, along which, it is supposed, MCMAHON was preparing to advance. The French loss was heavy, including many prisoners.

CARLSRUHE, Aug. 4.—Later.—The Prussian victory at Weissenburg was decisive. The troops engaged were regiments of the Fifth and Eleventh Prussian Army Corps and the Second Army Corps of Bavaria, led by the Crown Prince in person. The French force consisted of Gen. DOUAY's Division of Marshal MCMAHON's corps. Weissenburg and Geishill, in the rear of that town, were carried by storm at the point of the bayonet after an obstinate resistance. The General who commanded the French in the absence of Gen. DOUAY, was killed, with two officers of his staff. The French encampment, one piece of artillery, 500 wounded prisoners, including many Turkos, fell into the hands of the Prussians. On the German side, Gen. KIRCHBACH was wounded. The Grenadiers and Fifteenth Regiment suffered severely.

[Weissenburg is situated on the Lauter River, which at that point forms the boundary between France and Rhenish Bavaria, or the Palatinate. The Neustadt, Landau and Weissenburg Railroad passes through the town and connects with the road to Strasbourg. Lauterbourg is also situated on the Lauter, but nearer its confluence with the Rhine by twelve miles. There is no railroad laid down on the maps as running between Strasbourg and Lauterbourg. The town is within two miles of the Rhine. Weissenburg was reported as captured by the French on the 2d inst.—Ed. TIMES.]

Reconnaissance by McMahon—An Important Move Proposed—Present Position of the Prussian Forces.

STRASBOURG, Aug. 3.—Yesterday, after a Council of War, Marshal MCMAHON, with his Chief-of-Staff, Gen. COULSON, surveyed the Rhine from Kehl Bridge upward. They visited Brumath, twenty miles north of here, where a cavalry division and part of the First Division of Infantry are encamped. From these movements it is conjectured that MCMAHON, with the African Army is about to cross the Rhine and dash rapidly by the way of Carlsruhe and Heidelberg to Frankfort, and that thence he will endeavor to cut the railroad communicating between Berlin and the Rhine. It is believed he will leave Mayence on the left, while the main army pushes on through the lower Rhine Provinces to Mayence and Coblentz. The forward movement, it is rumored, is fixed for Saturday. It is reported that the Prussians are gathered in force in the South, and that a Baden force is in the Black Forest. Gen. DE GANJAL, in command of the second division of the corps stationed here, vacant by the illness of Gen. DOUAY, dropped dead from apoplexy on the 1st inst.

The Saarbruck Affair—Prussian Account—The Advantages Gained from a French View—Notes from Metz.

BERLIN, Aug. 4.—The Prussian Government furnishes the following account, more in detail, of the affair at Saarbrück: "A feeble garrison held Saarbrück until the French deployed and advanced in three columns. The Prussians then retired to a position north of the town to observe the enemy. In spite of the free use by the French of the Mitrailleuse artillery and Chassepots, our losses were only two officers and seventy men. The loss of the French appeared to be more serious. Our troops were admirably cool."

PARIS, Aug. 4.—The heights taken by the French at Saarbrück form a key to the railway approaches to Treves, hence the importance of the conquest. During the attack the bands played the "Marseillaise."

METZ, France, Aug. 4.—Fourteen Prussian soldiers, captured at the attack on Saarbrück, passed through this city late yesterday afternoon. Part of them were on their way to Belfort and part to Thionville, where they will be imprisoned. The Prussian wounded have been cared for the same as the French.

Another Circular from Grammont—Prussia the Aggressor—Serious Charges Against Bismarck—Two Accounts of the Document.

PARIS, Aug. 4.—The Journal Officiel publishes a diplomatic circular of the Duke DE GRAMMONT on the disarmament. The document, after refuting the statements of Count VON BISMARCK, terminates thus:

"If Europe remains armed, if a million of men are on the eve of the shock of battle, it cannot be denied that the responsibility is Prussia's, as she repulsed all idea of disarmament when we caused the proposal to be made and began by giving the example. Her conduct is explained by the fact that at that hour, when France confidently reduced her military contingent, the Cabinet at Berlin was secretly organizing the candidature of a Prussian Prince for the throne of Spain, so provocative of mischief. Whatever calumnies the Federal Chancellor may invent, we fear not; he has lost the right to be believed. The conscience of Europe and history will say, 'Prussia sought this war by inflicting upon France, preoccupied with the development of her political institutions, an outrage no nation could accept without incurring contempt.'"

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

The Duke of GRAMMONT has issued another circular, reaffirming that aggressive propositions originated in Berlin. France made none; on the contrary, she commenced her disarmament. Count VON BISMARCK bases his proposals on his anxiety about the plans of Russia, giving the details which the Duke DE GRAMMONT temporarily withholds. The Duke concludes, that owing to the falsehoods BISMARCK has already uttered through fear, he has lost all claim to be believed hereafter.

Danish Neutrality—Popular Clamor for France—Position of Portugal and Hungary—A French Ambassador Coolly Received in London—Belgium.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 4.—The Danish Government still struggles hard to preserve neutrality, but the popular excitement is intense and perhaps ungovernable. The sympathy for France among all classes is very marked.

LISBON, Aug. 4.—The Gazette of this city officially publishes the decree of neutrality on the part of Portugal in the Franco-Prussian war.

PERTH, Aug. 4.—The Diet of Hungary, yesterday, emphatically declared in favor of Austrian neutrality in the Franco-Prussian war.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—It is rumored that Count DE CAUMONT LA FORGE has arrived in London as a special messenger from the Duke DE GRAMMONT, to assure the Government that France will respect the neutrality of Belgium, and it is added that he has met with a cool reception.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 4.—The Chambers are called to meet on the 8th inst. M. JACOBS has been appointed Minister of Finance, and the Baron D'ANETHAN adds the charge of the Department of Public Works, ad interim, to his other duties as President of the Council and Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Refusal of Leopold's Brother to Obey Prussia—The Marseillaise to be the National Air of France—A War Song by Offenbach.

PARIS, Aug. 4.—The Constitutionnel says that the agent of Prince CHARLES of Roumania, in Paris, took an active part in procuring the renunciation of the throne of Spain by his brother, Prince LEOPOLD. The Berlin Government, irritated at the conduct of the agent, have demanded his dismissal, but Prince CHARLES refuses to yield to the demand. The Gaulois says the Emperor will issue a decree making the "Marseillaise" henceforth the national air of France. The French hospital service have 24,000 beds ready for the wounded. The Empress came to the Tuileries today and presided at the Council of Ministers.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—OFFENBACH, the opera-bouffe composer, though a German, has published a French war song entitled, "God Speed the Emperor."

The British Parliament—War Measures Discussed—The Policy of England—Meeting of the Liverpool Board of Trade.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—In the House of Lords, to-night, the Marquis of SALISBURY wished to know when discussion would be opportune concerning the recent negotiations of England with foreign Powers. Earl GRANVILLE replied that the papers with full details of what had taken place were nearly ready, and when they were submitted the Government would be prepared for debate. A bill authorising the effective organization of the militia forces of the country was presented and read for the first time, after which the House adjourned.

In the House of Commons, to-night, Sir G. S. JENKINSON gave notice that he should question the Government as to its intentions with regard to Belgium and the protection of her independence. Mr. OTWAY, Under Foreign Secretary, stated in reply to a question that the negotiations for the settlement of the Brazilian claims were progressing; and in response to another demand, objected to the production of old treaties with other Powers for the settlement of Continental affairs, declaring that the modern policy of the British Government was non-intervention therein. The Foreign Enlistment bill was debated in Committee. An attempt to extend its prohibitions to selling or contracting to sell vessels to a belligerent, failed.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 4.—A meeting of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce has been called to consider the expediency of petitioning the Government to prohibit the exportation of arms and munitions.

British Ports Crowded with German Shipping—A Defense of Spain—The Bank of England—Important Action.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The ports of England are rapidly filling with North German vessels, anxious to escape French cruisers. A circular has lately appeared from Señor SAGASTA, defending Spain as innocent of the cause of the trouble between France and Prussia. The document is well received. The official report of the Bank of England, made public today, shows that the amount of specie in vault has decreased £490,000 since the last report. The officers of the Bank of England have just announced a still further advance in the rate of discount of one per cent. The minimum rate is now six per cent. It is asserted that the bank rate was raised for political effect, not from financial necessity.

France vs. Prussia—A Wager Accepted—Berlin's Defenders—Forage Scarce on the Rhine.

BERLIN, Aug. 4.—The officers of the Union Club of this city have accepted a large wager offered by M. THOMAS, of Paris, that the French will be in Berlin on the 15th of August. A Prussian reserve of 100,000 men is encamped in front of Berlin. Forage is scarce in the Rhine Provinces, and the Prussian horse is suffering severely.

Sympathies of Americans in Paris—The Lee-Beauregard Canard—Sheridan's Visit to Europe.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—It cannot be true that the so-called American Legion in Paris will amount to anything. Private letters received here from responsible sources in that city say that the sympathies of Americans there are decidedly with Prussia....The story that LEE and BEAUREGARD have been refused service in the French Army is wholly gratuitous. LEE is President of a College, and has just been elected President of one of the most important railroad enterprises in Virginia, to which he pledges such of his time and energy as he can spare from college duties. BEAUREGARD is also connected with a railroad, and the Southern papers speak of what he will do this Fall in terms that do not intimate any probability of his desiring to go abroad....Gen. SHERIDAN, of course, has not indicated a desire to enter the French army, or even to visit it. He knew before he left this country that all foreign officers would be excluded, and his military associates did not understand that he would go to France at present. He does not go abroad with any official mission, but on leave of absence at his own expense, and in his own fashion. He has no orders, but understands the President's views, and will follow his own inclination about making a report when he gets home, which may be this Fall, and perhaps not till in the Winter ....The Prussian Legation is advised that many subjects of the Government living in this country will soon report at New-York and sail for home. Numbers of them seem actuated by patriotism, while others go to avoid the confiscation of their property.

Sympathy for France—Meetings in Chicago and St. Louis.

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—A Scandinavian meeting was held here last night. About 500 Danes, Swedes and Norwegians were present. The meeting was conducted in the Scandinavian language. Resolutions sympathizing with France were passed.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 4.—A meeting of Frenchmen was held to-night, at which sympathy was expressed for their countrymen now engaged in war with Prussia. A committee was appointed to raise money for the benefit of wounded French soldiers.

A German Steamer at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 4.—The North German steam-ship Leipsig, from Bremen, via Southampton, arrived here at 10¼ o'clock this morning.

LOCAL REPORTS.

German Patriotic Aid Societies—Plan for a State Organization.

The Executive Committee of the German Patriotic Aid Society of this City has made the following appeal for the organization of a German Patriotic Aid Society of the State of New-York:

The Executive Committee of the German Patriotic Aid Society of the City of New-York have shown, in their appeal to the Germans of the State of New-York, that it is, in their opinion, very desirable that an aid society be organized comprising the whole State, because a systematic co-operation of all Germans who have the national cause at heart would further that cause in the most effective manner. Prompted by this belief, the Executive Committee submit the following propositions to all Germans of the State:

1. That they do not merely make a single collection for the benefit of the wounded and of the widows and orphans of German soldiers who may fall in the war, but to unite in organized aid societies at their respective homes, and to continue in active operation during the war.

2. That they declare the aid societies thus organized to be branch societies of the "German Patriotic Aid Society of the State of New-York."

3. As the City of New-York is the seat of the North-German Consulate General, with which the Aid Society, from its very nature, will have to be in permanent direct connection; that the Executive Committee of the branch society of the City of New-York be recognized as the general agency of the "German Patriotic Aid Society of the State of New-York."

4. That on the last day of each month the sums collected during the month be remitted to Mr. PHILIP BISSINGER, (No. 13 John-street,) the Treasurer of the Aid Society of the City of New-York, who shall be obliged, at the close of the first week of each month, to publish a report of the sums so received from all branch societies, of which report a copy shall be sent to every branch society.

5. That in the various societies, at regular, stated intervals, meetings of the Executive Committee be held to consider ways and means for furthering the aims of the aid societies of their respective localities, and generally to entertain propositions, if any there be, concerning the improvement of the State organization in connection with the Executive Committee in the City of New-York.

6. That the Secretaries of the different societies be instructed to send, if possible, every week, or at least every other week, a short report concerning the activity of their societies to the Secretary of the Aid Society of the City of New-York, that he may be enabled to keep in a systematic manner the German-American, Anglo-American and European public informed on the ability of the general organization.

7. The funds raised to be used for the purpose of supporting the wounded and families of fallen German soldiers, and from time to time reports about such distributions be made and published.

All German patriotic aid societies of the State are requested to deliberate upon the above propositions as soon as possible, and, in case of approval, to notify the Secretary, at No. 160 Fulton-street, corner of Broadway, of it.

Delegates to the Chicago German Convention.

The Executive Committee of the German Patriotic Aid Society or this City, at their last meeting, appointed Hon. EDWARD SALOMON as delegate to the Convention of Delegates from German patriotic aid societies of this country, which will be held at Chicago on the 18th inst. Dr. E. KRACKOWITZER was elected Vice-President of the Committee, and Messrs. M. MEYER, of Hoboken; F. A. SCHROEDER and W. G. TAAKS, of Brooklyn, were appointed members of the Committee. The physician's subcommittee reported that already six physicians had been sent from this port as assistant surgeons in the German Army at the expense of the Society, and that four more were examined and approved. The Treasurer, Mr. PHIL BISSINGER, reported to the Committee that the subscriptions made with him amounted to $34,412 60. Over sixty subscription books have been distributed by him.

Meeting of the Brooklyn German Aid Society.

The Executive Committee of the German Patriotic Aid Society of Brooklyn has organized, by electing the following officers: Messrs. F. A. SCHROEDER, President; P. WEIZEL, Vice-President; THEO. JUENCKE, Treasurer; MAX ARMING, Recording Secetary; G. SCHIMMEL, Corresponding Secretary; W. G. TAAKS, GEORGE KINKEL, LOUIS BURGER, Finance Committee. The Executive Committee has resolved that their Society join the German Patriotic Aid Society of this City, for the aid of wounded German soldiers, and the support of the families of fallen German soldiers in the present European war. They also have made an appeal to the Germans of Brooklyn to organize ward aid societies for raising funds, and that one delegate from each of these ward aid societies be a member of the Executive Committee, which will meet once a week. The subscriptions thus far made by the Germans of Brooklyn, for the purpose stated, amount to about $2,000.

French National Subscriptions.

The Executive Committee of the Frenchmen of this City, appointed for the purpose of making collections for the aid of wounded French soldiers, and for the support of the widows and orphans of those slain in battle during the present European war, met at No. 21 West Houston-street, last evening, Mr. P. A. GERDY presiding, and Mr. L. MEUNIER acting as Secretary. The several members of the Committee turned over the money received by them to the Treasurer, Mr. A. VATABLE, Jr., who has now the sum of $8,031 40 on hand. Among the subscriptions were some made by German and Swiss firms of this City, who have contributed both to the German Patriotic Aid Society and to the French Executive Committee. The Committee will meet for a similar purpose every Thursday evening. It is believed that the Frenchmen of this City will make up about $12,000; those of New-Orleans about $15,000; those of San Francisco about $10,000, and those of Chicago, Baltimore, Philadelphia, St. Louis and Cincinnati, together, about $2,500, so that about $40,000, or from 150,000 to 175,000 francs, in gold, will be sent as a testimony of patriotism by the Frenchmen of this country to France. It is intended to send one-third of the money to the International Society for the wounded in the field; one-third to the Aid Society, at Paris, for wounded soldiers, and for families of fallen soldiers, of which the Empress EUGENIE is President, and one-third to a similar society at Paris, whose President is EMILE GIRARDIN.

German Immigration.

Out of the total number of 19,764 immigrants that arrived at this port during the month of July, there were 7,371 Germans against a total number of 25,022 immigrants, with 10,225 Germans among them during the month of July in 1869. From Jan. 1 to July 31, there arrived at this port a total number of 148,844 immigrants, a among them 55,094 Germans, against a total number of 168,211 immigrants, and among them 64,654 Germans, during the same period of last year.

MARITIME LAW.

Declaration Agreed Upon by the Paris Convention of 1856.

The British Foreign Office has published the following copy of the Declaration of Maritime law agreed upon by the Paris Congress of 1856, and since almost universally accepted by other Powers: The Plenipotentiaries who signed the Treaty of Paris of the 30th of March, 1856, assembled in Conference—Considering: That maritime law, in time of war, has long been the subject of deplorable disputes; that the uncertainty of the law and of the duties in such a matter gives rise to differences of opinion between neutrals and belligerents which may occasion serious difficulties, and even conflicts; that it is consequently advantageous to establish a uniform doctrine on so important a point; that the Plenipotentiaries assembled in Congress at Paris cannot better respond to the intentions by which their Governments are animated, than by seeking to introduce into international relations fixed principles in this respect; the above-mentioned Plenipotentiaries, being duly authorized, resolved to concert among themselves as to the means of attaining this object; and, having come to an agreement, have adopted the following solemn declaration: 1. Privateering is, and remains abolished. 2. The neutral flag covers enemy's goods, with the exception of contraband of war. 3. Neutral goods, with the exception of contraband of war, are not liable to capture under enemy's flag. 4. Blockades, in order to be binding, must be effective—that is to say, maintained by a force sufficient really to prevent access to the coast of the enemy. The Governments of the undersigned Plenipotentiaries engage to bring the present declaration to the knowledge of the States which have not taken part in the Congress of Paris, and to invite them to accede to it. Convinced that the maxims which they now proclaim cannot but be received with gratitude by the whole world, the undersigned Plenipotentiaries doubt not that the efforts of their Governments to obtain the general adoption thereof will be crowned with full success. The present declaration is not, and shall not be binding, except between those Powers who have acceded, or shall accede, to it. Done at Paris, the 16th of April, 1856. (Signed) Buol-Schauenstein, Hubner, Walewski, Bourqueney, Clarendon, Cowley, Manteuffel, Hatzfeldt, Orloff, Brunnow, Cavour, De Villamarina, Aali, Mehemmed Djemil.

WASHINGTON.

The Army Bill—Review of its Principal Provisions—Indian Policy of the Government—Cowardly Assault Upon a Member of Congress—Maryland Politics—Chinese Labor in Baltimore.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—The examination of the new Army bill, at the War Department, shows that the gross amount required for the pay and allowances of the army will be considerably larger than under the former act. Even if all the supernumeraries and officers awaiting orders, numbering together about 400, had been mustered out without pay, the amount which others will receive at the new rates, exceeds the sum required last year for the whole body of officers. These 400 were drawing an average of three-eighths of full pay when the bill passed; now, in case they resign, they receive one year's pay in advance at the increased rate. When Attorney-General AKERMAN'S opinion on the unexpended balances first appeared, it was thought the contemplated advance payment to resigning officers could not be made, but it has been determined that the regular appropriation for the pay of the army for the current year can be used for the purpose, although estimates were not made with any such expenditure in view. Still the amount appropriated is large enough to meet this unexpected drain and carry on regularly the payment of troops till Congress meets in December. The provision about relieving officers, performing civil duties, as rapidly as possible, relates to those acting as Indian Agents. The President and Commissioner PARKER have been in correspondence with the representatives of the various Christian denominations, with a view to securing aid from the missionary organizations of each, and so far as possible, new agents will be selected solely with regard to their fitness and willingness to carry out the friendly policy of the Government toward the Indians. Several of the military agents have written for instructions. The law which has been issued in General Orders declares that any officer exercising the functions of a civil officer shall forfeit his commission. In case these agents cease performing the duties assigned them until relieved by orders they will be liable to trial, and so they do not see their way clear, and ask for special instructions.

BRUTAL ASSAULT WITH A CANE.

Mr. JOSEPH SEGAR, of Virginia, late applicant for a seat in Congress as representative at large, committed a most cowardly assault upon Hon. WM. S. LINCOLN, ex-member from New-York, at the Baltimore depot, at an early hour this morning. It seems that a communication had appeared in a Baltimore paper ridiculing his claims to a seat, and his general conduct around the House in connection with the matter. SEGAR had satisfied himself that Mr. LINCOLN wrote the article in question, and that the latter was expected on the 6 o'clock train from New-York this morning. He concealed himself behind one of the stone columns of the depot, and waited for the passengers to leave the train. As Mr. LINCOLN came out he stepped up behind him and struck him a murderous blow on the head with the large end of a heavy cane. Fortunately the beaver hat worn by Mr. LINCOLN partially checked the force of the blow, and the skull was not fractured, though the scalp was cut a considerable length. SEGAR followed up the attack until taken in charge by the Police. He was arraigned this afternoon on two charges, one of assault, and the second of assault with intent to kill. The Court held him in $5,000 to appear before the Grand Jury. Gen. ROBT. S. WILLIAMS appeared and gave bail.

THE NEGRO VOTE OF MARYLAND.

It is generally believed that the negro vote will give the Fifth Maryland District to the Republicans, and some of them have been trying to induce Ex-Gov. FRANK THOMAS to enter the field again for Congress, but his home newspaper says he is not a candidate and does not desire the nomination. An evening paper here says it is reported that several parties in the shoe trade at Georgetown, who rely on Boston houses for their stock, inasmuch as Chinese labor has already been employed in making up their goods in Massachusetts, have arranged with an agent in San Francisco to send here twenty-five Chinamen for the purpose of pursuing the occupation of shoe-makers.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

SWAMP AND OVERFLOWED LANDS.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office on the 2d inst, transmitted to the Governor of the State of Alabama patents for swamp and overflowed lands inuring to said State under the provisions of the act of Sept. 28, 1850, situated in the Mobile land district, and embracing 75,854 acres.

TAX ON DESTROYED WHISKY.

In the case of a distiller, whose bonded warehouse and contents is accidentally destroyed by fire, it is ruled that the destruction of the spirits is not such a removal as renders the tax due at its occurrence, but that in such cases the tax on the spirits destroyed is not due until one year from the date of the entry bond.

THE RIGHT TO VOTE.

Attorney-General AKERMAN has sent copies of the act enforcing the rights of citizens of the United States to vote, to all the United States Attorneys, Marshals and Clerks of Courts. Several copies were sent to each office.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

It appears from official data, that for the eleven months ended May 31, the imports exceeded the exports by $8,225,529. During the same period of 1869, the excess of imports over exports was $85,055,497.

MR. AKERMAN AND THE GEORGIA CASE.

Attorney-General AKERMAN declines addressing the Southern Republican Club, because in doing so he would have to allude to the Georgia case, which may soon come before him for a legal opinion. It is understood that Mr. AKERMAN favors an election this Fall in that State.

CUSTOM RECEIPTS.

New-York	$2,876,104

Presbyterian Unity.

The Pittsburg Gazette, April 4, says:

"Notwithstanding the adverse action of the General Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church on the subject of Union in Cincinnati last May, it appears that a large number of the ministers and people are determined to enter the United Presbyterian General Assembly. All the ministerial members of the Western Presbytery have united in a call for a meeting for that purpose. The Pittsburg Presbytery unanimously indorsed the conduct of those delegates who voted for union at a special meeting held last Monday."

THE ROPE.

The Death Penalty at Norwalk, Ohio—Execution of Bennet Scop—He Declares his Innocence to the Last.

From the Toledo Blade, Aug. 3.

At the Spring term of the Court of Common Pleas for Huron County, Judge PENNEWELL presiding, BENNET SCOP was convicted of the charge of murdering JACOB GOODMAN, a peddler, in whose employ he was at the time. GOODMAN was a peddler, a Jew by birth, who, from motives of good will and sympathy to one of his own faith and ancestry, gave SCOP employment and pecuniary aid. The murder, if we are informed rightly, was committed in the south-west part of Huron County, near the dividing line between Greenfield and New-Haven townships. SCOP was traveling with GOODMAN in a wagon. When passing the house of a Mr. HARTMAN, SCOP was observed to get off the wagon and get over the fence. An iron bar was taken from a lumber-pile and secreted in the wagon. This iron bar was afterward found near where GOODMAN was found lying dead or dying. The wounds of which he died were evidently made by this bar. It appears that SCOP, after dealing the death-blow to GOODMAN, pitched him out of the wagon, and while in the ditch plundered him of his papers and pocket-book. This is the theory of the case as deduced from the evidence given at the trial.

The only motive SCOP could have had for this murder of his friend and benefactor was to plunder him of what money he had. If he was guilty, he was guilty of a most cruel, heartless crime; and if innocent of the murder, his fate is one to be greatly deplored. SCOP'S incarceration dates from the 10th of October last. The prisoner maintained a cheerful submisson. to his fate, and conducted himself with a scrupulous observance of every rule of the jail, and with such kindly feeling for his fellow-prisoners, and respect for his keeper, the Sheriff, that the former always called him a "good fellow," while the latter acknowledges that he "never had so good a prisoner" under his charge. Naturally buoyant and mirthful, he seemed to relieve the gloomy, loathsome air of his prison; and no visitor ever chatted—for his invariable humor seems to bar the grave term converse—with him, but what he or she would truly forget that they were in the sad presence of a doomed murderer; and he was treated by visitors with as much attention as though he wore the laurel of a hero, instead of the ineffaceable brand of an assassin. Even the Sheriff's child delighted in passing behind the creaking, chilling iron door, to play with SCOP, and the latter would beg the Sheriff to let the child come to him.

A FAVORITE WITH THE LADIES.

Some of the ladies of the City often called upon the prisoner, and some of them would present him with sweetmeats, bouquets and other tokens of their sympathy and friendship. He was cleanly in his habits, and his appearance on the scaffold seemed to concern him as much as the preparation of his soul for the future state, and his last and most earnest request, on bidding the Sheriff good-night, last evening, was that he might be bathed all over this morning. Several days ago he began to arrange for his dying garments, and asked the Sheriff to buy him a new shirt, pantaloons, drawers and socks, and to give him a white coat and vest. The favor was kindly granted, and after the clothes were obtained he showed them to the visitors, in evident satisfaction with the manner in which his wishes and tastes had been gratified. His innocence was what he persisted in offering to the last, though he would not allude to the matter without questioning, "My innocence is the last thing I shall say on the scaffold," was his repeated expression. He doubtless had every hope of receiving Executive clemency till Friday last, when a positive refusal was received from Gov. HAYES, in response to the earnest solicitations of the culprit's friends for a commutation. On the receipt of this crushing denial the prisoner showed for the first time a sober, serious and deep appreciation of his condition, and this was all, for not a tear moistened his eye nor a sigh heaved from his breast, but that he was really struggling to repress both was apparent in his counteuance.

THE WIFE OF THE CULPRIT.

SCOP said to a reporter that he had had a letter from his wife two weeks ago, and from his little son, both very affectionate. His wife said it was too bad that her husband should be imprisoned for murder in three weeks after arriving in America, when no brick mark had ever been placed against him during all his life at home. While conversing in his cell, SCOP went outside and returning presented our reporter with a scrap of paper such as he gave to all who were friendly to him, on which was written: "Please accept this as a present from B. SCOP, and may you always think of me." After a pleasant chat, SCOP said: "Will you go and see my house.' Our reporter followed him and was led to the scaffold. SCOP looked upon the latter without emotion and smillingly talked about its efficiency. With a warm shake of the hand the reporter and the prisoner parted. SCOP is slenderly built, weighs about 130 pounds, has black hair, small grey eyes, with sharp nose and protruding jaws. On Monday morning he wrote a letter in German, which he sealed in two envelopes and gave to Cohstable MAESH, exacting a pledge from the latter to hold it for ten days, and if his wife did not come, to give it to G. JACOBSON, of Norwalk, with instructions to open and publish the same. It is not believed that the mysterious letter contains a confession, but it carries considerable interest. Last night the prisoner was restless, sitting up most of the time with the guard. At 11 he was in distress, smiting his breast, exclaiming, "Oh, my God! I am innocent!" He wanted to see his wife ann children. Shortly after 12 o'clock he said, "I will sleep no more till I sleep in my coffin. At 2 o'clock he laid down and slept 20 minutes; at 3 felt very bad, and fainted at 3¾. Then slept five minutes, groaning distressingly. He finally rose, washed himself, and said he wished the job was done. At 5 he commenced wandering around the jail, saying: "I have nine hours more to live, then I go to Heaven, or Buffalo, I guess to Heaven. I must go and see my horse without a saddle." Between 7 and 8 o'clock he was shaved, dressed, and ate a little breakfast. Friends call d to see him, and he ascended the scaffold with them, laughed, and said he was ready for business.

THE SCAFFOLD.

This being the first execution which has occurred in this county since its organization, a new scaffold was obliged to be built expressly for the occasion. Being completed, it was erected within the jail yesterday; its position being in the north-east corner, in the passage-way, opposite to that fronting SCOP'S cell, which was on the south side of the jail. While this hideous instrument of death was being adjusted, its intended victim looked upon it with the coolness of an uninterested spectator, and would even smile and make humorous comments upon its various parts. When talking about the size of the drop and the distance of the fall, he remarked with a shrug of the shoulder peculiar to himself, "I guess I can stand that." The cross-timber to which the rope was attached was twenty feet from the ground, and the platform containing the drop was of sufficient height from the brick floor below to allow the victim a fall of over six feet. During the forenoon several beautiful bouquets were presented, which he arranged on the scaffold. The bringing in of the coffin at 10 o'clock was the heaviest stroke and the poor wretch fairly broke down. Getting his Hebrew Bible he kneeled by the coffin, first at the head, and then at the foot and bowed his head in silent prayer.

After leaving the coffin he almost fainted, but was soon restored. At 12½ he was cheerful again, and with a smile remarked that there was but a brief time remaining. On the arrival of Rev. Mr. MAYER, a Jewish Rabbi from Cleveland, he sent two dispatches, asking the Governor to grant a respite in the name of God and justice, but the reply was that the law must take its course. After the dispatch was received from the Governor, the prisoner wrote a letter to his wife telling his fate, and bidding her and his two little children a farewell forever.

THE FINAL SCENE.

As the hour for the execution approached, the streets around the jail were packed with a motley crowd, and when the time arrived their voices could be heard in jail. Until the moment arrived for the condemned man to ascend the scaffold, SCOP was conversing soberly with friends. At length Sheriff CULP informed him that the final moment had come, when the prisoner readily proceeded up the corridor by which steps to the gallows were approached. Followed by the Sheriff, Rabbi MAYER, and Col. H. KELLOGG, as assistant, with elastic step the prisoner mounted the platform. When all were on the Mayor said, "The last words of the prisoner are, that he is innocent." SCOPP looked upon the spectators, and, with an unshaken voice, said, "The last words of BENNETT SCOPP are, 'I am an innocent man.'" Rabbi MAYER bade him farewell and turned toward the crowd and with tremulous emotion uttered something to himself with considerable excitement. SCOPP said in a loud tone, "I have not had an honest trial and have not had my witnesses. God knows that I am come to be hung for nothing, good by all my friends." The work of pinioning his legs and arms with a small cord was commenced by the Sheriff, when SCOP seized the latter's hand and each kissed the other. SCOP said good by to friends in the crowd below, and the latter said loudly in return, God bless you. SCOP, after kissing Col. KELLOGG and one or two others who stood by, stood erect, and with a smiling countenance, looked upon the work of binding his limbs, yielding the latter whenever necessary to make the ropes secure. When the numerous ropes were adjusted and his arms were securely fastened behind him, he jokingly said: "Many ropes—they make me dead alone." As the cap was being drawn over his head he told the Sheriff to give his respects to his family. On being asked if he had any more to say, he again affirmed his innocence. After the cap was tied he said: "God bless you all! good bye!" and at one minute after 2 o'clock the Sheriff sprung the drop, and SCOP was with his Maker. At the close of fifteen minutes the pulse ceased, and in twenty-five minutes after the fall, the jail physicians, Drs. REED and FORD, pronounced the body dead. Being cut down, an ineffectual attempt was made to reanimate it by a galvanic battery. It was then coffined and buried in Norwalk, the brothers in Buffalo having telegraphed this morning that they did not care enough for it to pay for transportation.

THE "RED STOCKINGS."

Monthly Meeting of the Club at Cincinnati—President Champion's Resignation not Accepted.

From the Cincinnati Commercial, Aug. 3.

The monthly meeting of the Cincinnati Base-ball Club was held in Room No. 18, Catholic Institute last evening. Fully one hundred members were present. The routine business was quickly and very quietly disposed of, and then President CHAMPION arose and made a statement of the finances of the Club.

He began by saying that the time had come in the history of the Club when a full statement of its finances should be made. This can be done only by reviewing its history. The Club was organized July 23, 1866, and began its career by involving itself in debt, by the renting of the old grounds at the foot of Richmond-street, and for the improvements placed thereon. Finding these grounds too small, the Club entered into an agreement with the Union Cricket Club, of this city, to lease the present Union Grounds and improve them.

The Cricket Club had about $2,000 capital, and the Base-ball Club was to raise a similar amount, and the two clubs should have a joint control over the ground. In 1867 new debts were contracted, and the Cincinnati Club found itself in debt to the amount of $700. The Union Grounds proprietorship were likewise greatly in debt, and the prospect in the Winter of 1867-8 was very discouraging. Fearing that both clubs would be ruined by the course then pursued, the Cincinnati Club made overtures to the Cricket Club, which were accepted, and the Cincinnati Club became sole proprietors of the Union Grounds, assuming the indebtedness and giving to the Cricket Club the privilege of playing on the grounds one day in each week.

In November, 1868, after assuming the liabilities of the Union Grounds, the Cincinnati Base-ball Club was in debt in the sum of $9,000, a portion of which consisted of notes in bank, given to pay for the building of the Grand Duchess, &c. The Club felt that it was its duty to pay off a note of $3,000 upon which the Directors of the Cincinnati Base-ball Club, and of the Union Cricket Club, who had kindly indorsed it, were held personally responsible. At a meeting of the Club a committee was appointed to solicit subscriptions, and they were authorized to dispose of $7,500 worth of stock. They succeeded in selling only about $3,000 of stock. That amount was used to pay the liabilities of the Club and the salaries of players which had fallen due.

In 1869, at the beginning of the season, the Club were indebted for the Union Grounds in the sum of $6,000, and in addition to that it had contracted for a professional nine, at a cost of about $9,000, for the ensuing season. All this accrued before the 15th day of November, 1869, and in addition there was the rent of the Union Grounds. So that on March 1, 1869, the liabilities of the Club amounted to between $15,000 and $16,000, all of which had to be paid before Nov. 15, of that year.

The Club started on an Eastern trip. The managers were sanguine that it could be made a success. A subscription was started and about $500 raised for the purpose of defraying expenses. The members of the nine were given such money as they needed, and they started on their trip, the President having about $250 and his tickets in his pocket. When they reached New-York the funds were entirely exhausted, but the trip proved to be a success, and they returned to Cincinnati having netted about $1,700. This sum was afterward increased, by receipts on the Union Grounds, to $2,200.

Various other trips were taken during the year, one of which, to Chicago and Milwaukee, realized $900; one to California, in the neighborhood of $1,000; and games were played, at which there was a very large attendance, at the Union Grounds. At the close of the season, after the nine were paid off, an indebtedness of about $1,000 remained, out of the $15,000 or $16,000 of debt due at the opening of the season; consequently they have really cleared off during the year a debt of over $14,000.

The skating season was a failure and money had to be raised in some way. A gentleman of the Club advanced $1,400, $900 of which was appropriated to paying the salaries of the players, and $500 for the rent of the Union Grounds. When the New-Orleans trip was projected this same gentleman furnished part of the funds. This trip was not a success, and before the Club started on their Eastern trip their indebtedness to this gentleman amounted to in the neighborhood of $2,000. That trip was a success, the amount realized being $9,966 58, the expenses $2,863 06, leaving a net profit of $7,102 92.

The accounts of the President, which were now submitted, showed a balance in his hands of $2,023 67. In addition to this the Treasurer had in his hands the sum of $1,500 in cash and $500 in United States bonds.

The President was gratified to be able to make such a showing as this. After passing through a hard and severe struggle the Club now found itself in a condition better in all respects, financially and otherwise, than any other club in the country. There had been complaints made by many members of the Club that the financial condition was not made known to them. The reason that this was not done was because the officers did not deem it expedient that the financial condition of the Club should be known to the public, or perhaps to many of its members. For that reason the Executive Board and the executive officers were at pains to keep to themselves the financial condition of the Club at the clock at Fifth-avenue, and was then on the same side of the street with Mr. NATHAN'S residence.

Q.—Did you hear any alarm that morning before the time you saw these young men? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Did a whistle, or anything of that sort, attract your attention? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Do you remember seeing a man named PATRICK GOVEN, a porter in the Fifth-avenue Hotel? A.—Yes; I saw him sweeping off the walk.

Q.—Before you saw these men on the stoop? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did he make any alarm of any kind? A.—He was calling me when I heard the alarm.

Q.—Then he gave the first alarm? A.—No, Sir; the first alarm I heard was from these young men.

Q.—You recognize one of the young men who was standing on the stoop that night as Mr. FREDERICK NATHAN, now in Court. A.—Yes.

Q.—Who was the other? A.—WASHINGTON NATHAN.

Q.—Who were the inmates of the house you saw that morning besides the two sons? A.—I don't think I saw any one except the woman in the basement.

Q.—At what hour previous to this alarm, at a quarter to six, had you examined that house? A.—Half-past four o'clock.

Q.—Did you examine the door or try it? A.—When I went past the door at a quarter to six I examined it; that was about four or five minutes before the alarm; I had just passed the house, and was going toward Sixth-avenue when I heard the alarm.

Q.—So that when you passed the house on your way to the Sixth-avenue you noticed the front door, and you swear it was closed? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—At half-past four o'clock you tested the door by taking hold of the handle? A.—Yes.

Q.—At any time during the night did you examine the front of the house so as to ascertain whether the front door was open or not? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the condition of the second story—the apartments in which the murder occurred? A.—I did not take any notice of them until I went there in the morning. The two windows had screens, one of which was raised twelve or fourteen inches; they had ordinary fly-screens.

Q.—Were the windows open? A.—Yes.

Q.—Were any of the shutters closed? A.—No, Sir; I was the first person that entered the house that morning except the inmates.

Q.—Was there any light burning in the room in which Mr. NATHAN slept, or in the adjacent room? A.—There was a light burning in the room in which he slept, and in the other room the safe was kept; the light was placed near the window, and burned in toward the wall without being concealed from the street.

Q.—From the position of the light toward the window, if it were burning all night, could it be seen from the street? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—At any time during the night had you seen that light? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Did you look to see whether it was burning or not? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Walking at the opposite side of the street would you have been likely to see a light, if it burned there? A.—Yes.

Q.—When you entered the room did you notice what doors were open leading to the room? A.—Yes.

Q.—What were they? A.—There was the door leading from the front room into the library; Mr. NATHAN was lying with the principal part of his body on this front room; the door leading into the hall was open also; I opened one of the back room doors myself.

Q.—How many doors were there between Mr. NATHAN'S room and the house-keeper's? A.—I think there were two; one of these rooms was open, but the door leading from Mr. NATHAN'S room to the passage was closed; that was the one I opened.

Q.—At that time who were present in the room? A.—I think Mr. FREDERICK NATHAN was the only one present.

Q.—Do you know where the other inmates of the house were? A.—The other brother, I think, was in the hall.

Q.—How long were you in there before the other officer came? A.—Fifteen minutes.

Q.—Did this porter from the hotel go with you? A.—I don't recollect whether he was there or not; I don't think I requested him to go with me; there were a lot of men came in the front room, but how far they came into the house I can't say.

Q.—When you first entered the house you saw this instrument they call a dog? A.—I don't know whether it was when I first passed the hall or when I returned; my attention was called to it by Mr. FREDERICK NATHAN. (The "dog" found in the residence of Mr. NATHAN was here produced and identified by the witness.)

Q.—What portions of it were stained with blood? A.—One of the ends of it.

Q.—Any portions of this round part covered with blood? A.—In the middle of it there were some spatters on it.

Q.—How long were you on that post? A.—Two or three months, off and on.

Q.—Have you any knowledge of the occupants of that house for the past months? A.—Nothing more than that I saw an old gentleman standing on the stoop at different times.

Q.—Were you aware that Mr. NATHAN was in the country? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Was your attention ever directed to that house as a house that a family had vacated for a time? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Then you only gave that house the attention you usually give to all houses? A.—Yes, Sir; I examined the door at a quarter before six o'clock that morning, and it was closed.

Q.—Between half past four o'clock and a quarter to six was there any difference in the position of that door? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Had you seen carriages standing on the street at any time that night? A.—I saw a carriage standing at No. 103 Twenty-second-street.

Q.—Do you know what is the character of that house? A.—It is a house of prostitution.

Q.—During the time you were on your post that night did you meet any person on the street whose appearance or actions attracted your attention? A.—No, Sir.

Mr. RUSSELL—How many nights before this fatality were you on this post? A.—Three or four nights, but for a period of three months I was on it regularly.

Q.—How long would it take you to walk over your post? A.—When trying the doors it would take me three hours.

Q.—When you passed the house at a quarter to six, the door was closed? A.—Yes.

Q.—When after was your attention called to the fact whether it was opened or closed? A.—I heard somebody speak about the door being open.

Q.—When was that? A.—Some time during the morning.

Q.—Who made that statement to you? A.—I cannot recollect, but I think it was one of Mr. NATHANS; he said, when he came down, one of the doors was open; I then told him it was opened when I passed back; he said he could not swear whether the door was closed or not.

Q.—Did the conversation then stop? A.—I don't think there was any more said about it.

Q.—Did it not attract your attention as being somewhat peculiar when he said he found that door open when you found it was closed? A.—The door was closed and I cannot be mistaken on that; it was broad daylight; I had gone to the other side of the street between half past four and a quarter to six o'clock, but I can't tell the hour.

Q.—Was there any portion of the shutter between the light and this front room? A.—There was no shutter closed.

Q.—When you and the Mr. NATHANS entered the room was there anybody with you? A.—I don't recollect; I don't know that there was any one else entered the room until the officer came.

Q.—You had not brought any one else besides the officer and these young men there? A.—No Sir; I could not tell when Capt. BURDEN came.

Q.—What was the position of the body? A.—He was lying on his back; the chair was turned up.

Q.—Did you notice whether there was any blood on that chair or not? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Did you notice how the safe was? A.—I did not notice whether the key was in it or not.

Q.—Did you see the drawer of the safe? A.—I saw it on the bed.

FOREMAN—After entering from the hall you saw immediately the body? A.—Yes, I saw it as quick as I went in; I looked over the bed and saw the body lying beyond.

Mr. FELLOWS—When you picked up this "dog," did you notice if there were any drops of blood on the marble tiling? A.—I did not take notice.

Q.—Did you observe whether the blood upon the end of the "dog" was dried? A.—It was.

Q.—Did you notice any imprints of bloody footsteps in the hall or on the stairs? A.—I saw them on the stairway and on the hallway going into the room; these were Mr. NATHAN'S tracks.

Q.—Did you notice whether these footsteps were ascending or descending? A.—I observed none ascending.

Q.—Did you at any time observe on the stairs ascending bloody footsteps? A.—No. I saw them on the hallway and on the stairway.

Q.—At any time did you see marks of blood going from the foot of the stairs to the front door? A.—Yes.

Q.—Which way? A.—Toward the door and none in the other direction.

Q.—Did you see any blood upon the door handle or nob? A.—No, Sir, these footprints were the only marks of blood.

Q.—When you entered the room did you notice the condition of the bed? Was there any blood upon it? A.—None that I saw; there were some coppers upon it.

Q.—Was there any mark of blood upon the drawer? A.—I did not examine it.

Q.—Did you look round the floor in the direction of the passage leading to the back room where the housekeeper slept, or in the direction of the passage way on the left side which went to the bath-room, to see if there were any marks of blood? A.—No.

Q.—Did you see the clothing Mr. NATHAN was supposed to take off the night before? A.—I saw the pantaloons, shirt and vest.

Q.—Did you examine them to see if there was any blood upon them? A.—I saw that afterward but not at that time; they were lying on the chair middle ways in the room next the wall; I saw Mr. FREDERICK NATHAN take up these clothes; I asked him if the gentleman had any watch or pocket-book, and if the pocket-book had any money in it; he took up the waistcoat and found it was gone; I did not see if there was any marks of blood upon it; he took up the pantaloons and had a pocket-book in his hand, but I could not say if he took it out of it; I did not see any blood on the pantaloons, but if it was in any considerable quantity I would have noticed it.

Q.—Was the shirt examined by you or him in your presence? A.—I noticed Mr. FREDERICK NATHAN walked across the floor and kicked his foot against the shirt.

Q.—Were there any studs upon it? A.—No.

Q.—Was there any blood on the bosom? A.—None whatever.

Q.—Did you observe whether there was a gold button on the neck of it? A.—Yes, and there were sleeve buttons on the wrists; I think they were fastened as though the hand had been drawn through the sleeves.

Q.—Did you see Mr. NATHAN step on it? A.—No; I saw him kick it.

Q.—You noticed no spots of blood on the carpet of that room except in the neighborhood of the body? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Any blood upon the furniture? A.—No, except some I saw on the wall close to the door.

Q.—Was the blood on one side or both sides? A.—On one side.

Q.—You noticed a chair about the centre of the room? A.—Yes, Sir; next to the table, with the back of the chair facing east, in the direction of the front door.

Q.—Did you notice that chair at the time? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Did you notice a pool of blood immediately south of the chair; close to it? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did you observe any blood upon the hearth-stone? A.—I didn't see any.

Q.—Did you observe a chest of carpenter's tools? A.—Only three tools—a saw, a screw-driver, and a hammer.

Q.—Did you examine them? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—How were they lying; in an orderly or disorderly way? A.—Orderly.

Q.—I understood you to say that you found the housekeeper in the basement? A.—Yes, Sir; in the kitchen.

Q.—Did she seem to be aware of any disturbance? A.—Oh, she heard of the excitement; the excitement woke her up, I believe.

Q.—What was she doing when you found her in the kitchen? A.—I didn't take notice.

Q.—What did she say to you, or you to her? A.—I don't know that I said anything.

Q.—You say your brother-officer told you there had been one of the rear doors opened? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—What door was it? A.—I think it was the hall door going out from the rear.

Q.—There were two doors to the basement? A.—Yes, Sir; an iron lattice first, and then an inner door.

Q.—Did you examine those—both of them—when you were in the house? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did you examine them to see if they were both securely fastened? A.—I examined them to see what kind of doors they were; I examined them the next day.

Q.—You did not examine the character of the fastenings of those doors? A.—No, Sir; I didn't take no notice of it.

Q.—By Mr. RUSSELL—Which of the NATHANS was it that you had the conversation with about the doors being open when you went by at a quarter to six o'clock? A.—I don't remember; they were both present.

Q.—When you picked up the dog in the hall, did you notice whether there was any blood there in the hall where it lay? A.—I don't remember whether there was or not.

By the CORONER—You stated you discovered blood on the shirt of FREDERICK NATHAN; describe the character of it—its size. A.—Blood about as big around as that, [witness exhibits his arm;] his shirt here was bloody in front, and some here on the bottom; there appeared to be a kind of spot of blood on the bottom, and round here on the front.

Q.—It looked as if he had been leaning over the body? A.—He might have been leaning over, on something or other.

Q.—Did you observe any blood on the shirt of WASHINGTON NATHAN? A.—No, Sir, I didn't see any.

Q.—The last time you passed the door, about how far was you from the door when you heard the alarm? A.—About one hundred feet.

By District-Attorney FELLOWS—Q.—Was the housekeeper in bed when you went in there? A.—No, Sir; she had got up.

Q.—You stated that the excitement woke her? A.—I should judge so; she told me so afterward.

Q.—What excitement was there—these doors were closed—what excitement was there that would have alarmed her. A.—She told me that young Mr. NATHAN came down stairs and hollered in the room and woke her up.

Q.—She informed you that the noise she heard in the hall woke her? A.—Either from the hall or room; I don't know which.

Q.—When Mr. NATHAN—the one or both of them—called on the front steps, did they speak in a very loud tone? A.—Yes, Sir; appeared very much excited.

Q.—Do you recollect precisely what they said? A.—I think they said, "Officer, come in! come in! officer!" says I, "What's the matter?" he says, after I got up the steps, "My father has been murdered!"

Q.—When did you have this conversation with Mrs. KELLY? A.—I saw her when I was down getting my meals—down stairs; I was then tending the door at different times.

Q.—When did you see Mrs. KELLY? A.—I don't know; I did not see her that morning to my recollection; I saw her a day or two afterward; it was then she told me that it was the noise that alarmed her.

Q.—You are perfectly confident that in going from Mr. NATHAN'S room into Mrs. KELLY'S you opened only one door? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—By Mr. FIELD, the Foreman—Was this a thick wooden door—the upper part glass? A.—I opened it so quickly that I didn't notice what it was; I have not seen it opened since.

Q.—Before you went into the house, did you rap for assistance? A.—Once.

Q.—Did you get a reply? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—What did you do then, go in? A.—Without waiting for any other officer I went into the building.

Q.—When you went upstairs there was nobody with you but Mr. FREDERICK NATHAN and his brother? A.—That is all.

Q.—You recognize both of those gentlemen here? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—You are quite sure Mr. FREDERICK had no stockings on? A.—I cannot say.

Q.—I mean Mr. WASHINGTON? A.—I didn't take notice whether he had stockings on or not: I can't swear.

Q.—Can you swear that Mr. FREDERICK NATHAN'S stockings were bloody? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—You say the bloody foot-prints upon the marble tile in the lower hall were made by Mr. FREDERICK NATHAN'S bloody stockings? A.—That was my impression.

Q.—Did Mr. FREDERICK NATHAN have on those stockings when he went upstairs? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did it not occur to you as something strange that there were no impressions of bloody feet going upstairs; I understood you to say that there were no impressions going back? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—That blood upon the tiling looked as if it had just been placed there? A.—It looked so.

Q.—Still there were no traces of blood in returning? A.—I didn't examine the stairway closely, nor hallway; I saw tracks of blood going towards the front door.

The Coroner here asked the jury if they had any questions to ask, remarking that it was of the utmost importance that every possible fact should be elicited.

Q.—By Mr. O. H. MILDEBERGER, a juror—Did you observe anything on the wall? A.—Yes, Sir; something that might have been made by fingertips, but not clearly such; they looked as if they might be dotted against the wall.

Q.—They were not well defined? A.—No, Sir, I do not believe they were finger marks.

Q.—By Mr. FELLOWS—Now, Sir, in entering the room (the bedroom of Mr. NATHAN) from the hall, you looked across the bed on which he had been sleeping and saw the body? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—As soon as you entered you had no difficulty in seeing the body? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Could a person as short as I am look over the bed and see the body? A.—Yes, Sir, I should think so.

Q.—There was no difficulty in seeing the body from the position you occupied on entering? A.—No, Sir, no difficulty at all.

By the FOREMAN—Q.—The first time you went up to the room immediately after this young gentleman had called you, who walked first, you or one of them? A.—I think one of them was ahead of me; I think Mr. FREDERICK NATHAN went ahead of me, or alongside of me, I could not say positively.

Q.—Was it after that that you made what observation you did make in relation to the bloody foot-prints in the hall? A.—I saw them when I was going in; I took notice of the prints as I was going up the stairway; I saw them afterward too; I saw them measuring the print of the foot.

Q.—Then you think that by FREDERICK NATHAN going in front of you, or by your side, any footprints there might have been from his feet didn't escape your notice; I mean they didn't escape your notice for that reason? A.—I didn't take notice of any, except one or two marks on the steps and hallway.

Q.—After you first visited the room you looked at the hall? A.—No, Sir; I didn't take much notice of them; I went upstairs to examine the house to see if any body was in it.

Q.—What I am trying to find out is this: Whether, if there had been bloody footsteps in the direction of upstairs, either on the tiling or on the stairs, they would have been likely to have escaped your attention. A.—I should think they might; I don't think they would; but I didn't take notice.

By Mr. RUSSELL, a juror—You have spoken of a conversation you had with Mrs. KELLY a day or two afterward, and also of going in a hurry from the front room, where the body lay, through a passage-way, and opening a door where Mrs. KELLY was; when was that? A.—That was after I entered the room; we were searching upstairs; went away up the scuttle and came down again; I could not tell what time.

Q.—How long was it after you first entered with the young man into the room where Mrs. KELLY was? A.—I should thing about twenty minutes, fifteen or twenty; I didn't see Mrs. KELLY until I went down-stairs; my object was to catch whoever might be in the house.

Q.—How long after you came into the house before you saw her? A.—About half an hour, I should think; when I went down-stairs, she was then dressed.

Q.—You have said nothing about Mrs. KELLY'S son; you did not see him at all? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—When did you first see him? A.—Some two days afterward.

Q.—You went all over the house with the young gentlemen NATHANS to see whom you could find? A.—Yes, Sir.

By Mr. FELLOWS—These footprints that led from the foot of the stairs across this marble tiling were they so far apart as to indicate that the man was running or walking? A.—I could not say, but I thought it was a walk.

Q.—Where was this "dog;" how close to the door? A.—It lay down inside the hall, on the left as I was going out of the door.

Q.—Close by where the "dog" was lying were there any bloody foot-prints? A.—I did not examine.

Q.—Who was this officer that came in next? A.—Officer ROWLEY.

Q.—Did he examine these foot-prints? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Did you remain there until any detective came? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did Capt. KELSO or Capt. JOURDAN arrive before you left it? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Any other detective officers with them? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Where did you see them? A.—In the room.

Q.—Do you know their names? A.—They are in the room here now; that gentleman sitting over yonder, (pointing to Detective BENNETT.)

By the FOREMAN.—Mr. FIELD—Do you know anything more in regard to this case—any circumstances about the house in relation to which you have not been questioned, and which you think it would be important, in the interests of justice, to communicate? A.—I believe I was not asked anything about this tin box.

Q.—Well, tell us all about that. If there is anything that you know of, tell it. A.—In that small room (the study) the safe was open; I saw a table standing there, a chair opposite, back down; and I saw two bundles of papers in front of the safe; a tin box set right next to the chair, between the window and the chair, with the lid open, some papers lying on the desk; that is all I saw.

Q.—Where was the key to the safe? A.—I don't know, Sir; I didn't take notice.

Q.—Did you see the key to the safe at all? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Was there anything else on the bed? A.—Yes, Sir, a wooden box.

Q.—What did that wooden box contain? A.—There were three coppers; two old coppers.

Q.—Was that an open wooden box? A.—Yes, Sir; had a drawer; looked as if there might be a knob on it.

Officer ROWLEY was then called, but no response was received.

Q.—At what time were you on Twenty-third-street and Fifth-avenue? A.—Twenty minutes before three o'clock; I was out all night; I had been in about five minutes past two o'clock; I went down Sixth-avenue, on the corner of Twenty-third-street, about five minutes to two; went down to Seventeenth-street to Broadway; up Broadway to Twenty-third-street, in company with Officer MORGAN; I stood on the corner, I suppose, about ten minutes.

Q.—Which side of the street? A.—On the Park corner.

Q.—Did you look down Twenty-third-street? A.—I did; I looked down every street as I came up; twenty minutes before three I was on that corner.

Q.—Was everything quiet in that vicinity? A.—Apparently.

Q.—No carriages to be seen? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Did you see any lights in the windows on the south side of the Fifth-avenue Hotel? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you look? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—State whether your observation of Twenty-third-street, taking in that block between Fifth and Sixth avenues, was such that if a light had been burning in No. 12 at that hour you would have seen it. A.—I hardly think I should.

By Mr. RUSSELL, a juror—Had you been about there more than once? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—You say you were out all night; what time did the shower begin and end? A.—I think about that time the shower had about stopped.

Q.—Didn't it stop about twelve for a little while? A.—It stopped two or three times; I could not tell.

PATRICK GOVERN, Dr. JAUDON and Officer MERRITT were next called, but were absent, and Mr. PHILIP LAMBRIE was called and deposed: I am a carpenter; was employed on the 28th of July at Mr. NATHAN'S.

Q.—What was you doing there? A.—Fixing sashes, general housework; we were fixing the front parlor windows on Thursday afternoon.

Q.—When you went in there in the morning who was with you? A.—No one; I walked into the alley-way, put my hand into the gate-way, shoved the latch, went in and didn't see anybody.

Q.—What did you do after you went into the house? A.—Walked up the basement stairs to the parlor floor; went on to the second floor and sung out "SMITH!" and received no answer, and went to the third floor and sung out "SMITH!" again; I got no answer and came down stairs again, and while waiting for SMITH I went into the kitchen and saw Mrs. KELLY, and asked her if she had seen SMITH, the other carpenter; she told me no; I asked her where he had left the tools the evening before; she said she didn't know, and I commenced looking round the kitchen for the tools, and she told me she thought she had seen him putting them away under the table in the hallway, and I went and saw no tools, and I commenced reading my paper; the gentleman who minded the house (Mr. KELLY) was going out for something, and in the meantime I told him the yachts had come in.

Q.—How did you know that? A.—I saw it in the paper; I don't know that he said anything to me then—anything in particular—and I believe he went out again, and said he was going to get a newspaper; I went to the shop and asked another carpenter working there if he had seen SMITH; he said, "No," and I said, "SMITH must be sick; he has not come to the house;" after sitting there a little while, the man said, "Come with me to Twentieth or Twenty-first-street to another Mr. NATHAN'S," and I went around there with him for a little time—no! before I went SMITH came to the shop, and I told him I was going down to the shop and he told me to bring some green paint with me; after leaving Mr. NATHAN'S, at Twentieth-street, I went around to the shop and got this green paint, and went to Mr. NATHAN'S, in Twenty-first-street, and walked upstairs, and saw SMITH in the second story; he was fixing some blinds; I believe we went down on the parlor floor and commenced about the windows; that was on Thursday; we didn't leave the windows till we had finished painter time, and at dinner time we bolted the inside blinds and when we returned they were fastened the same as when we left at twelve o'clock; in the afternoon I could not find a hammer we had worked with, and I went up on the second and third floors and into the attic before I found it; then we went down into the basement to work. [Witness was here shown the iron "dog" in question.] Q.—Do you use any such thing as that? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Work continuously until you quit? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—What hour did you usually go to work there? A.—About seven o'clock.

Q.—Did the young gentlemen sleep there? A.—I only saw one; that gentleman with the hat in his hand [pointing to WASHINGTON.]

Q.—Did you see him in the morning? A.—I saw him twice in the morning, and I saw him, I think, on a Wednesday evening at the house; when I saw him the two mornings he was coming down as if from his sleeping-room; I saw him one morning about half-past nine o'clock.

Q.—Did this Mr. KNIGHTS that called upon you in the house learn from you anything about the habits of the inmates of the house? A.—No, Sir; I said nothing about any of the family.

Q.—How late did youremain there on Thursday night? A.—About ten minutes to six.

Q.—How did you go out of the house? A.—Through the basement.

Q.—Did you notice the arrangement of the bed in that room that afternoon? A.—Yes, Sir; when I was passing through from four to five I saw two or three mattresses, or during the day I saw some mattresses there, and they were like drawn round, as if one had fallen off the other.

Q.—You four persons were the only persons at work at that time? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Were the mason and his assistant at work all the four days as well as you and Mr. SMITH? A.—I saw the mason and laborer on Thursday in the house.

Q.—Do you know whether they were the same ones? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—You spoke of Mr. KNIGHT'S seeing you in the cellar? A.—Yes, Sir, on Tuesday.

Q.—What hour in the day? A.—Half-past ten or eleven o'clock in the morning.

Q.—What is his full name and residence? A.—ALFRED KNIGHTS; he lives in, Atlantic-avenue, in Brooklyn.

Q.—Had he any business with you? Yes, Sir; it was about a money affair.

Q.—Between you and him? A.—Yes, Sir, about speculation.

Q.—Some speculation in which you were interested? A.—Yes, Sir; an investment he was going to make for me in varnish.

Q.—Did he go into any other part of the building than that cellar? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Was he ever in that house before to your knowledge? A.—Never that I know of.

Q.—Did anybody else visit you at that place during those four days? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—You are quite sure? A.—Quite sure.

Q.—Did you see anybody that was visiting Mr. SMITH there those four days? A.—No, Sir, while I was there I am certain that no one visited Mr. SMITH.

Q.—Did you see any person visiting or talking with the mason or his assistants during those four days? A.—Yes, Sir; I saw the master-mason.

Q.—Besides him did you see anybody? A.—No, Sir; I didn't see anybody at all.

Q.—How came you to go there the next morning? A.—The detective came after us.

Q.—How long did you remain there then? A.—I think an hour or an hour and a quarter.

Q.—During the four days you were there was the basement door opened or closed? A.—It was open.

Q.—It was open through the day? A.—Yes, Sir; so as to let the draft go through the house.

WITNESS—I don't remember seeing any stranger about the house during that week.

Mr. RUSSELL—Had you any occasion to go to the rear of the house? A.—Yes.

FOREMAN—Did you hear any one mention that Mr. NATHAN was coming on Thursday afternoon to sleep in the house? A.—Mrs. KELLY told me in the presence of SMITH that he was coming.

Q.—Have you at any time talked to any person about this house or the presence of the safe in the office? A.—SMITH spoke once about its probable cost, but I had no conversation with any one else on the subject.

Q.—You have some knowledge of the construction of the house? A.—Yes.

Q.—Is it your opinion that if a person in the stillest hour of the night called out to a person on the top of the house, from the room in which Mr. NATHAN slept, he could fail to hear him? A.—I don't believe he could have heard him, except he hallooed at the top of his voice.

Q.—You have understood where the different inmates of the house slept? A.—Yes.

Q.—Assuming that Mrs. KELLY occupied the back room, Mr. FREDERICK NATHAN the room over the office; that WASHINGTON NATHAN occupied the rear hall bedroom on the same floor, and young KELLY occupied the room above WASHINGTON; that the NATHAN'S, Sr., room was opened; that it was the hour of night when everything was still, do you think that any extraordinary noise in Mr. NATHAN'S room would necessarily have been heard by all or any of the persons in the house? A.—It would have been heard, I think, on the same floor, but above it would be impossible.

Q.—Have you noticed what doors there are in the passage, or between Mr. NATHAN'S room and the house-keeper's? A.—No, Sir; I have not examined them; I think there are three doors.

Mr. RUSSELL—You remember when the caulkers were employed there a year and a half ago? A.—Yes.

Q.—When you worked there six months ago was there any one worked there with you? A.—GEORGE HOIT worked with me there.

Q.—Do you know whether they had anything like a "dog" with them? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever see anything like a "dog" there? A.—I never saw an implement like that; I have frequently entered that house without knocking; I could open the door by shoving back the bolt.

FOREMAN—You and SMITH when you finished your job that Tuesday afternoon, what time was it? A.—About a quarter to six; we passed out through the basement, closing the gate after us, but I don't know if we closed the door.

Q.—You had occasion to go through the house a good deal that day? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you think, up to the time you left the house, if any one was concealed there you could have failed to see him? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—In a basement how could a person conceal himself? A.—I don't think any one could conceal themselves, except seen by the inmates of the house; there were several closets in the house which a person could be concealed in; I don't know if any of them were open or not.

Q.—Did you notice the wardrobe in the passage leading to the bath-room? No, Sir.

Q.—Do you think were there any facilities in the upper floors for the concealment of any one? A.—No, Sir, except in the closets.

Q.—Could you say if it were not possible for a man to conceal himself before you left. A.—I could not say.

TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM H. SMITH.

WILLAM F. SMITH, carpenter, who resides in No. 256 West Fortieth-street, testified:

Q.—Where did you work on the 28th July? A.—With previous witness, at Mr. NTAHAN'S, where I was employed for two days; I went to work about seven o'clock on Thursday morning, and got in without knocking; Mrs. KELLY asked me to go into Mr. BENJAMIN NATHAN'S room, and do the first of my work there, as he intended to sleep there that evening, and she wanted to fix it up as early as possible; I finished the repairs in Mr. NATHAN'S room about eleven o'clock, and then went to the parlor.

Mr. FELLOWS—You say you were in every room in the house that day; what is your impression as to the possibility of any person going in and concealing themselves? A.—I don't know anything about concealing themselves, but I suppose there is a chance for concealment in every such house.

Q.—Do you think a person could have got into that house and have concealed himself that day? A.—(Very emphatically) I don't doubt it in the least.

Mr. RUSSELL—During the time you were in the house did you see any one visit Mr. LUSTRIE? but Mr. KNIGHTS? A.—No; no one visited me either.

Q.—Did you see any stranger or person whose business you did not know about the building? A.—No.

Q.—Your attention was given solely to the windows and coal-bins? A.—Yes; I gave no attention to the drawers or closets.

FOREMAN—After you left the house on Thursday evening, ten minutes before six, did you mention to any one that Mr. NATHAN was coming home? A.—No, Sir,

Q.—Have you ever spoken to any one in connection with NATHAN'S house or the safe, or his supposed wealth? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Do you think a person could be concealed in any of these rooms? A.—It would not be hard to do so, for there were so many closets in the house it would not be hard to hide there.

Mr. FELLOWS—Did you see that "dog," or anything that looked like it, about the premises at any time that you were there? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Are such implements employed in your trade as carpenter? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Have you ever seen one in a ship carpenter's yard? A.—I think I might have.

Q.—When you left Mr. NATHAN'S house that evening where did you go? A.—I went home and did not leave until the detective came for me the following morning.

The last witness (LUSTRIE) was here recalled, and in reply to a juror said that after leaving Mr. NATHAN'S house on Thursday evening he went to his employer's, and then went straight home; went out during the evening, but had no conversation with any one in regard to Mr. NATHAN'S family or the nature of the work he was doing. He gave a straightforward and minute statement of all that he did on the night of the murder, and in a manner perfectly satisfactory to Coroner and Jury.

A postponement of the inquest until this morning was suggested at this point of the evidence, and the Coroner and members of the jury expressed their anxiety to continue, and bring the case to a conclusion as speedily as possible. Mr. FELLOWS, however, explained that it would be impossible to resume the inquest in that Court on Tuesdays and Fridays, for it would be occupied in the disposal of its regular business; and as he would be compelled to go to Saratoga on Saturday to consult with Judge GARVIN, who was very ill there, in reference to this and other important cases, he suggested that the postponement be extended over to next week. While he would not ask that the jury should be inconvenienced to oblige him, he desired, as did Judge GARVIN, to be present at the whole of the investigation, and endeavor to assist in unraveling the mystery which surrounded this case.

The Coroner and jury then unanimously agreed to a postponement till 10 o'clock on Monday morning.

Developments in the Case Yesterday.

Unusual quiet prevailed at Police Headquarters yesterday. For the first time since the tragedy Superintendent JOURDAN was not harassed by numberless persons rushing upon him with theories that were without value, and suggestions that were equally worthless. Mr. HARMON NATHAN called at noon and had a long private interview with the Superintendent and Capt. KELSO, but nothing was divulged of what passed. With this exception nothing worthy of note was visible in the deserted halls and offices of the Police palace, and the respite must have been greatly enjoyed by Superintendent JOURDAN who, ever since the murder, has been overwhelmed with labor, hardly having taken time to recruit his strength by necessary sleep. As a proof of how much his time has been wasted it may be stated that Wednesday evening he received a dispatch from the Sixteenth Precinct that a check-book with the name of B. NATHAN on the cover had been picked up at the corner of Eighteenth-street and Eighth-avenue, by two men who had seen a young man drop it and walk rapidly away. The matter seemed singular but it must be probed and the Superintendent was forced to go at once to that distant part of the City. On arriving at the Station-house half a dozen inquiries and a glance at the book was sufficient to show that some mischievous person had been attempting a hoax. The so-called book was only the black covers of printed subscription checks for some book or other canvasser, and on the back of one of these covers had been scrawled with a lead-pencil in rude chirography the inscription "B NATH." The matter was dismissed without further thought, Superintendent JOURDAN even declining to keep possession of the so-called check-book which some practical joker had endeavored to thrust into the case.

The Enquirer, of Aug. 4, says: "Yesterday morning United States Deputy Surveyor GOODRICH, accompanied by Special Agent HOUSTER and Inspector REDHEFFER, made a visit to the British ship Stadacond, CASSIDY, commander, which arrived at this port on Monday from Londonderry, and found secreted between the stairs and breadlocker a quantity of fine silk dress goods, amounting to over $7,000, which were at once taken poss

THE WATER FRONT.

Meeting of the Dock Commissioners—Repairs and Improvements Proposed—A New Pier Submitted.

At the usual weekly meeting of the Commissioners of Docks, held yesterday afternoon, all the members of the Board were present. A representative of the Long Island Steamboat Company was present, to explain the non-existence of any platform for passengers at Pier No. 24, the Superintendent of the Board having reported said pier as having no platform of the kind required at passenger landings. Some discussion ensued as to the best method of remedying the defect. This was left for Superintendent WESTON to adjust. Mr. HUNT reported from the Executive Committee with reference to the docks used by the street-cleaning contractors. The parties offending having agreed to remove the cause of complaint, the Committee was discharged and their report adopted. I. STEVENS' petition to be allowed to build a bulk-head between Forty-seventh and Forty-eighth streets, was denied. The same action was taken with refereece to other and similar requests, on the ground that the Board was considering plans for improving the water front of the City. The petition of the Washington Ice Company was denied; ANDREW JOHNSON was allowed to build a ten-foot platform at the foot of Fourteenth-street, North River, at owner's expense, he paying $100 per annum rental; the report of the Auditing Committee for the month of July was made by Mr. WOOD and accepted; the Board has in the Tenth National Bank $296,-203 37; disbursed in July, $22,169 18; several communieations were read and referred to the Executive Committee; Gen. MCCLELLAN sent a request to have an office assigned for the draughtsman to the Chief Engineer. A resolution offered by Mr. HENRY, empowering the Superintendent of Supplies to employ men and materials and proceed with the repairing of all piers where it would not cost more than $2,500, was debated and finally adopted. The following piers will be operated on at once: Bulkhead at Fifteenth-street; piers at Fifty-fifth, One Hundred and Thirty-first and One Hundred and Thirty-eighth streets. East River—Piers Nos. 1, 20, 23, 40, 41; bulkheads between Piers Nos. 6 and 7, 11 and 12, 18 and 19, 51 and 52; foot of Corlears-street; Piers Nos. 51 and 52; foot of Cherry-street. The cost of repairs already determined on will amount to $15,967.

Mr. DOW read a long paper on his method for improving the water front of the City. He proposes to occupy the East River between Corlear's Hook and the foot of Broad-street, making two or three large basins, with surrounding warehouses, admitting vessels of all descriptions and sizes to pass through at high tides or stated periods of the day or night, according to this plan the wharves and piers are to be faced with stone and filled in with earth, making solid ground for buildings and streets, except at the ship passage-ways, which are to be crossed by bridges of 40 to 75 feet long. One hundred feet is to be the width of the central street, the stores and warehouses on each side but one to be 50 feet. Five hundred feet is to be the width of each causeway. The plan seems to have the advantage of being the most expensive of any yet proposed.

After considerable general discussion the plan was ordered on file. The Board then went into executive session.

The Greenville Clubbing Affray—Result of the Coroner's Inquest—The Boy Butler Committed to the County Jail.

On Wednesday evening, Corner BURNS, of Jersey City, held an inquest in the village of Greenville, on the New-Jersey Central Railroad, upon the body of the boy AUGUSTUS THAU, whose death on Tuesday evening from the effects of injuries received in an altercation with a comrade, was reported in these columns on Wednesday. The inquest, which was not concluded until a late hour on Wednesday night, developed some additional particulars which places the case in a new light. According to the testimony of the witnesses, the circumstances of the affray were as follows: The deceased and his playmate, JOHN BUTLER, (the former aged twelve, and the latter ten years,) were playing ball together on Monday afternoon, when a quarrel grew out of the fact that the ball had been thrown into a pool of mud. THAU, who was the larger of the two boys, struck BUTLER with his fist. The latter ran away, carrying his ball-bat. A short time afterward, having met his mother, he started to walk home with her. They met young THAU, whom MRS. BUTLER scolded severely for his attack upon her son. While she was speaking to THAU, young BUTLER stepped out from behind her and, walking up to his late assailant, dealt him a blow upon the head with the bat. THAU fell senseless, and was soon afterward carried to his home, where he died, as already reported, from the effects of a fractured skull. The testimony went to show that Mrs. BUTLER, so far from aiding her son in his attack, as had been believed, had done all in her power to prevent a fight between the boys. Young BUTLER's own story agreed with that of the other witnesses, and is in substance identical with the foregoing.

The jury rendered a verdict that the "deceased came to his death from the effects of a blow from a ball-bat, inflicted by JOHN BUTLER." The lad was committed to the County Jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

NAUTICAL NOTES.

A Brilliant Time Anticipated at the Yachting Contest on Monday—Prospect of Another Race Between the Cambria and Dauntless—The Sapphe.

The scene in the Lower Bay on Monday next, on the occasion of the great race for the Queen's Cup, will probably be an universally lively one, and will be watched with eager interest on the part of the public. The event will be regarded as a very conspicuous one in the annals of American yachting, and will be hailed with enthusiastic huzzas should it result in a victory for the present holders of the English prize. Upward of twenty-five beautiful crafts will be present in line at the starting point off the lower extremity of Staten Island, ranging from the large schooners of more than 200 tons, like the Alarm and Fleetwing, to sloops of thirty tons and thereabout, like the fast-sailing Jessie. Numerous steamers, with gaily-dressed excursionists of both sexes on board, will proceed to the course, and will help to make the nautical spectacle more animated. It is uncertain whether the famed Dauntless will make her appearance among the contesting yachts. Her owner, Vice-Commodore BENNETT, has announced that his chances of winning over the smaller craft would be very small, unless favored with a stiff wind, and that he hesitates about sailing on that account. Mr. ASHBURY is also doubtful about gaining the Cup with the Cambria for the same reason. The first-named gentleman, it is understood, made an offer to Commodore ASHBURY for another match between their two celebrated yachts, but the latter declined to sail sixty miles to windward and back, which distance was proposed by the challenger. It is not unlikely, however, that another race will be witnessed between the Dauntless and Cambria, before the latter returns across the Atlantic. A fresh throng of visitors assembled at the Dry Dock, at the foot of Pike-slip, East River, yesterday, for the purpose of viewing the yachts which are now there undergoing repairs.

It is expected that the annual cruise of the New-York Yacht Club squadron, this season, will extend over a couple of weeks, and will furnish considerable enjoyment to those who intend participating in it. The start will be made about the 10th inst. A great deal of uneasiness is now felt in regard to the yacht Sappho, which left Queenstown Harbor on the 8th inst., four days behind time, and Dr. SHINE expressed the opinion that Dr. GRINDLE had been guilty of gross negligence, if nothing worse. GRINDLE was held to await the action of the Grand Jury in the sum of $5,000, and he remains in the nominal custody of Messenger HALEY until the bail is forthcoming.

Attempted Wife-Murder in Jersey City.

Yesterday morning AMOS MOORE, a resident of No. 40 Monmouth-street, Jersey City, was arrested on a warrant issued by Justice ALLEN, upon the complaint of a neighbor of the former, who charged him with attempting to murder Mrs. MOORE on Wednesday evening. The testimony laid before Justice ALLEN proves that the ruffian's attack upon his wife, who was suffering from a severe illness, was of the most brutal character. He first knocked her down with his fist—having received some slight provocation—and then avowing his intention to take her life he beat and kicked her, stamped upon her with his heels and lacerated her nose, lips and ears with his teeth.

The cries of the victim brought the neighbors to her rescue, but the fiendish husband escaped arrest. He was apprehended, however, by Constables FARLEY and O'KEEFE, yesterday, and Justice ALLEN, in default of $2,000 bail, committed him to the County Jail for trial.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

Stealing and Disposing of Stolen Goods—Violation of Health Ordinances—Sudden Death—Police Court Cases.

MICHAEL BUTT, porter for Messrs. PATON & Co., at No. 341 Broadway, was arrested, yesterday, by Detective FIELD, of the Fifth Ward, and arraigned before Justice SHANDLEY, at the Tombs, on a charge of larceny, as he had carried off a box of "Dona Marias," valued at $135. The prisoner confessed the fact, and stated that he had sold the property to JULIUS METZLER for $20, the latter knowing it to be stolen property when he purchased it. JULIUS was also arrested at his pawn-shop, No. 49 East Houston-street. The Magistrate held both of the prisoners for examination on the complaint of THOMAS C. M. PATON, the senior member of the despoiled firm.

JOHN F. SCOTT, master of the bark Contest, was arrested yesterday on the complaint of KENNETH REID, Deputy Health Officer of the Port, on a charge of having violated the Health ordinances in removing his vessel from the Quarantine anchorage without permission, and after he had been ordered to remain for five days longer. The offense was commenced on the 18th of July, and the vessel came from Rio Janeiro, there being considerable danger of infection. When the delinquent Captain was arraigned before Justice SHANDLEY, he was required to find $1,000 bail to await trial at the General Sessions.

The following sudden deaths occurred yesterday: LOUISA BERSCHON, at No. 449 West Forty-fifth-street; HANNAH JACKSON, at No. 1,507 Broadway; HUGH DUGAN, at No. 825 Second-avenue; PETER BAXTER, at One Hundred and Forty-seventh-street, near Eighth-avenue; GEORGE SCONKLIN, at No. 129 Norfolk-street.

FRIEDRICH LIEBERMAN, a native of Germany, aged forty-two years, was held for examination by Justice SCOTT, at the Essex Market Police Court, yesterday, to answer a charge of having stolen twelve yards of velvet, valued at about $70, from the factory of Mr. LEWIS PATTBERG, at No. 561 Broadway, where he formerly worked. The defendant said, by way of justification, that he had a claim against the employer.

GEORGE ENGEL, who was employed by Messrs. JAMES FAGAN & Co., steam-packing box manufacturers, at Nos. 154 and 156 Bank-street, as a clerk to solicit orders and to collect money, was held by Justice SCOTT, at the Essex Market Police Court, yesterday, under $500 to answer a charge of having embezzled the sum of $100 belonging to his employers.

GEORGE ENGEL, a native of Germany, aged forty-nine years, was held by Justice SCOTT, at the Essex Market Police Court, yesterday, under $500 bail, to answer to a charge of having stabbed JACOB SCHNEIDER, residing at No. 254 East Houston-street, in the breast, with a carving-knife, on the 1st inst.

WM. MULLADY, a printer, aged seventeen years, was held by Civil Justice FOWLER, of the Third Judicial District, who was sitting on the bench in place of Justice COX, at the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, under $2,000 bail, to be tried at the Court of General Sessions for felonious assault and battery. He was charged with having stabbed JOHN WRAY, living at No. 274 Bowery, three times on the head, on the 31st ult.

About 3 o'clock yesterday morning a fire was discovered near the furnace in the iron-foundry and frame buildings of VAN TASSEL & CO., Nos. 522, 524 and 526 West Thirty-third-street. A damage amounting to $1,000 was done, which is covered by a policy for $3,500 in the Columbia Insurance Company.

At 2½ o'clock A. M., yesterday, a fire broke out in the shed in Eighty-first-street, near Third-avenue, occupied by WILLIAM FISCHER for the storage of lumber, which, together with a two-story and attic frame house adjoining, occupied by CHRISTIAN KERNS, was totally destroyed. The loss of each party was about $2,000, but both were fully insured in the Germania. Both buildings were owned by THOMAS FERRIS, and were valued at $1,500.

JAMES MCMANN, of No. 156 Chrystie-street, at an early hour yesterday morning, got into a Third-avenue car at Park-row and Ann-street, to go home, but fell asleep, and did not awaken until he reached Eighty-seventh-street. Leaving the car at that point, he was followed and assaulted by man who had also been in the car, and who, after inflicting three severe scalp wounds upon him, fled before he could be arrested. The wounded man was cared for by the Police.

JAMES BOATMAN was found in Mulberry-street, yesterday morning, with a severe cut on the head which he had received at the hands of some unknown person. He was taken to his home by the Police.

A quarrel occurred at an early hour, yesterday, at the corner of New-Chambers and Cherry streets, during which one HENRY F. JOHNSON received a severe cut made in the right temple at the hands of MICHAEL GRIFFIN, who escaped before the arrival of the Police.

While some men were at work, yesterday, in the sewer, Seventy-fifth-street and Tenth avenue, a derrick fell, breaking the leg of THOMAS HEALEY and injuring JOHN REYNOLDS and WM. MCCABE severely about the head. They were taken to St. Luke's Hospital.

The Steam-boat Inspection Service.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I noticed your editorial article in today's paper under the head of "Steam-boat and Railroad Disasters." Are you not a little harsh in condemning the entire "steam-boat inspection service" from the fact that explosions and disasters occur on the Mississippi River?

When Western steam-boat owners adopt the style of machinery in use here (and there is no objection to it except its cost) steam-boat traveling will be as safe in all parts of the country as it is here. Statistics show that more than 100,000,000 passengers were carried by steam vessels during the year 1869 on the waters of the Atlantic coast, this side of the capes of Virginia, without the loss of a single passenger from any defect of hull or machinery. And if you will compare the present statistics with those previous to the passage of the Steam-boat law I think you will admit that steam-boat inspection has some "conceivable efficiency."

When Western steam-boat owners use larger cylinders, smaller wheels and a lower pressure of steam they will study their own interests and the greater security of the traveling public.

Meeting of the Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen met yesterday afternoon, Alderman THOMAS COMAN, President, in the chair. There were present Aldermen Irving, Jerome, McKeever, O'Neil, Diamond, Mitchell, Stitchting, Welsh, Plunkett, Reilly and Woltman. At large number of resolutions relating to the paving and sewering of streets were laid over. A resolution was read authorizing the Metropolitan Fire Extinguishing Company to lay pipes and tubes through every street, pier and alley in the City, and on motion, was referred to a Select Committee, the President appointing Aldermen REILLY, WOLTMAN and IRVING as members of such Committee. A resolution was also read and concurred in, relating to the death of Assistant Alderman HENRY ROGERS, of the Ninth District, and eulogising his character as a man, and a faithful and efficient public officer, after which the Board adjourned until Thursday, the 11th inst.

A resolution was read and laid over, providing for the rescinding of a resolution passed some time since, authorizing those in charge of the erection of the new Post-office to put up a fence, and directing that the Commissioners of Parks take charge of the City property.

BASE-BALL.

Union vs. Atlantic—Game Postponed.

The game announced to be played between the Union and Atlantic Clubs at Brooklyn, yesterday, did not take place, owing to the rain. These clubs will not now play together until they meet in the series of grand matches for the championship. All their games hitherto have been but mere "social," or practice games.

Union vs. Eckford—Contest Today.

These clubs will play a game together at Tremont, today, on which occasion a fine contest may be anticipated. Trains will leave for the ground at 2 P. M. and 2½ P. M.

Athletic vs. Forest City, of Rockford.

The Athletics, after defeating the Cincinnati and Chicago nines, were yesterday defeated by the noted Green Stockings of the Forest City Club, of Rockford, by a score of 15 to 10. This game affords another striking illustration of the folly of going into a match with too much confidence of winning. The Athletics thought they had a "soft thing" after learning of the easy defeat of the same nine by the Mutuals and Harvards.

The Grand Match on Saturday.

The grand match between picked nines of New-York and Brooklyn, arranged for the benefit of the family of the late Mr. PICCOT, promises to be a very fine contest. The two cities will be represented by excellent players, and after the ball match there is to be a grand match at La Crosse. Mr. ASHBURY, of the Cambria, and the owner of the Dauntless are to be guests of Mr. CAMMEYER on the occasion. The match takes place on Saturday, at 3 P. M., on the Union Grounds.

Lacrosse.

The game to be played on the Union Grounds, Saturday, at the Picoot benefit, will prove very interesting and exciting. It will be Brooklyn vs. New-York—the white caps representing Brooklyn and the reds New-York. The first twelve who are to do battle for the Club against the crack organizations of the Dominion will be chosen from among the players of this game. The Club leaves for Montreal on the 18th inst. On Saturday they will throw their new Club flag (recently presented by a prominent banker) to the winds for the first time. We understand Mr. ASHBURY, of yacht fame, will honor the occasion by hoisting the flag. He will thus also be enabled to witness the national games of the United States and Canadas.

Confidence Operators Arrested.

GEORGE BAKER and MICHAEL WELSH were arrested in Jersey City, last evening, on a charge of having attempted to defraud an immigrant, LOUIS SCHAFFER by name, out of $208. SCHAFFER was about to sail for Europe, and was on his way to the vessel when WELSH introduced himself as a fellow-passenger. They had been but a few minutes together when BAKER stepped up and presented to WELSH a bill, amounting to $900. WELSH had no ready cash with him; would SCHAFFER cash a draft on London? SCHAFFER was in the act of acceding, when Detective STRATFORD, who had watched the proceeding, took the two operators into custody. SCHAFFER could not stay to press the charge, and they were discharged. They were immediately rearrested on suspicion of having some months ago defrauded an immigrant on his way to California, and are held for examination.

Defrauding the Revenue by Disfiguring Stamps.

A distiller in Hoboken named MCGINNESS was arrested by United States Detective MCDONOUGH on a charge of attempting to defraud the revenue by disfiguring the gauger's stamps on his liquor-barrels. Commissioner MUIRHEAD, of Jersey City, held him to answer in $5,000 bail. The detective had discovered two barrels of whisky, the stamps upon which had been tampered with, in a saloon on the Paterson Plank-road, kept by one LOUISE GUILLAND. Upon inquiring he was informed that they had been purchased from the accused. On searching his establishment a number of barrels were discovered upon which the gauger marks had been disfigured.

A New Railroad in New-Jersey.

The organization of the Longwood Valley Railroad Company was completed on Tuesday, Aug. 2, at a meeting of the directors held at Dover, N. J. The following are the officers elect: President, CHARLES MCFARLAN, Dover; Treasurer, JOHN D. CHAMPLIN, Jr., New-York; Secretary and Attorney, J. H. NEIGHBOUR, Dover; Executive Committee, CHARLES MCFARLAN, J. D. CHAMPLIN, M. G. MOSES. The survey will begin next week, under direction of EDWARD CANFIELD, Chief Engineer. The line runs from a point on the New-York State line near Stirling, to a point on the Morris and Essex Railroad, a short distance west of Dover.

DECISIONS.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM—AUG. 4.

By Judge Freedman.

Fowler vs. Brownfield; motion denied with $10 costs, and temporary injunction dissolved.

THE WAR OF THE BILL-POSTERS.

Amos F. Learned vs. John Mahon.—In this case the plaintiff asked for relief by way of injunction against the defendant, restraining him from trespassing on certain bill-posting domain to which he (plaintiff) claimed an exclusive right. The injunction has been granted by Judge FREEDMAN, covering nineteen different premises described in plaintiff's complaint, and denied as to three, because the license was revocable and had been revoked; as to one because there was no proof of authority in the clerk who gave the permission; as to one because there was no proof of authority in the lessee, and as to another for the reason that no such fence as that described in the complaint existed.

THURSDAY, AUG. 4—P. M.

The extra Cunard steamer Siberia, for England, carried out today $1,584,000 in Gold. This large shipment was quite as much a surprise as the small sums sent out by the Cuba and the Manhattan yesterday. The exports of the two days amount to about two and a half million of dollars. The additions likely to be made to this sum by Saturday's steamers depend, as far as we are able to arrive at the situation in England, upon the extent of the Cotton bills in abeyance in Liverpool in consequence of the failures in the trade advised by Cable. An old and highly respectable house went down yesterday, and all their acceptances, together with other bills in default drawn from this side against the May and June shipments of Cotton, impose upon our Bankers here the necessity of covering the reclamations or losses on the Cotton pledged for these bills, in Gold or sight Exchange. This, at last, enters into the causes influencing Gold shipments, after the active return of United States 5-20s has confessedly ceased. One of the large New-Orleans Banks is reported as holding £150,000 in the shape of reclamations upon protested Cotton bills. Other Bankers, here, are supposed to hold inadequate security on their Cotton Exchange purchased late in May and through the month of June, and while the chances of ultimate loss may not prove seriously against them, they are reasonably solicitous to place funds on the other side to make good all possible deficiencies.

The Bank of England today further advanced the rate of interest to 6 ℔ cent. Whether this be deemed a precautionary measure only, or an evidence of existing distrust in the London market, the measure is not without its influence here, although the announcement today, coupled as it was with additional Cotton failures in Liverpool, and the large Gold shipment by the Siberia, failed to advance Gold beyond 122@121¼ ℔ cent. The sight rates of Exchange and Cable transfers of Gold on London, are ⅛@¼ ℔ cent stiffer than yesterday, and the rates on 60-day bills somewhat unsettled. Sight Bills are 110⅞@110¾ ℔ cent.; Cable transfers, 111⅛@111¼ ℔ cent.; 60-day Bills, Bank signatures, 109¼ ℔ cent.

Our own Money market is undisturbed by the occurrences abroad. Being on the Greenback basis, there is no reason why it should be adversely affected at present, especially in the absence of active speculation on the Stock Exchange or in Merchandise or in the Gold Room. The Gold Room is singularly free from excitement. While the prevailing feeling is in favor of getting the very best price for all the Gold demanded by foreign interests for export, there is not the slightest distrust in our Legal Tender Currency or the relative position of the Country to the War troubles in Europe. The mercantile calculation is not an unreasonable one, that our consumption of foreign Merchandise will go on as usual, probably increasing 5 to 10 ℔ cent. over the last fiscal year, as last year increased 7½ ℔ cent over the previous year, and that our Exports of cereals and provisions will be enhanced by the exceptional condition of War and the partial failure of the harvest on the Continent.

The announcement by Cable that Specie payments in Paris are partially suspended is explained by some authorities on the Street to mean that the French Government in place of borrowing five hundred million of francs has created this sum of Treasury paper, which like our own Greenbacks during and since the War against Rebellion, will be made the basis of all general transactions. The vast sum of Gold in the Bank of France will be held in reserve for the exigencies of the War, and Bank of France Notes redeemed, if demanded, in Silver. The announcement today further restricts the drawing of Bills on Paris, and will turn all Continental remittances to London.

The Public Funds are better today by ⅛@¼ ℔ cent. than yesterday. The amount of 5-20s to the Sinking Fund was unexpectedly light, and the amount coming from Europe has fallen below the weekly demand to supply the Sinking Fund purchases of the Treasury. The 1867s advanced to 109@109¼ ℔ cent. on the Street, and the sums offering are unusually small.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE WAR.

The importance of the French victory at Saarbück, it is claimed, is due much to the fact that the heights form a key to the railway approaches to Treves. Fourteen Prussian soldiers, captured in the attack, passed through Metz on Wednesday. The Prussian wounded, it is said, receive the same care as the French. During the action the French bands played the "Marseillaise." In the Prussian accounts of the affair the garrison at Saarbück is termed feeble; the forces held the city until the French advanced in three columns, when they retired to a position north of the town to observe the enemy. The German loss is stated to be two officers and seventy men, and the troops are said to have been admirably cool. A reserve of 100,000 men are encamped in front of Berlin. The Union Club of that city have accepted a heavy wager laid by M. THOMAS, of Paris, that the French would enter the Prussian capital on or before the 15th inst. Forage is scarce in the Rhine Provinces, and cavalry horses are suffering thereby. On Wednesday, Gen. MCMAHON, accompanied by his Chief of Staff, made a survey of the Rhine, from Kehl Bridge to Brumuch, twenty miles distant, and it is conjectured that he, with the "African" Army, will soon make a rapid advance, crossing the river at Carlsruhe, and strike for Frankfort. The movement, it is reported, will be made on Saturday.

GRAMMONT has issued another circular in Paris, in which he reaffirms that aggressive propositions came from Berlin, and charges BISMARCK with falsehood, uttered, as he says, through fear. The Empress presided at the Council of Ministers, at the Tuileries, yesterday. NAPOLEON, it is said, will issue a decree making the "Marseillaise" the national air of France. OFFENBACH has composed a war song entitled "God speed the Emperor." The French Hospital Service has 24,000 beds already prepared for the wounded. Prince CHARLES of Roumania, it is reported in Paris, refuses to accede to the demand of Prussia to remove his agent in that city, because he took an active part in procuring the renunciation of the Spanish crown by LEOPOLD, the father of the Prince. The official report of the Bank of England made public yesterday, shows a decrease in specie of £490,000 since the last report. The rate of discount has been still further increased one per cent, more, it is stated for political effect than financial necessity. English ports are rapidly filling with German vessels anxious to escape French cruisers. A circular has recently appeared which is well received in London, in which Señor SAGASTA defends Spain from the charge of having been the cause of the war. The arrival of Count DE CAUMONT LA FORCE in London is rumored, with a special message from GRAMMONT assuring the Government that France will respect the neutrality of Belgium. His reception, it is added was a cool one. In the British Parliament last night, the debates were constantly interrupted with questions pertaining to the war, but no definite replies were made by those authorized to speak for the country. A meeting of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce has been called to consider the policy of a petition to the Government to prohibit the exportation of arms and ammunition.

Portugal has officially declared neutrality in the contest. The Hungarian Diet, on Wednesday, declared in favor of Austrian neutrality. A dispatch from Copenhagen states that the Danish Government is struggling to maintain a neutral position, but that the popular clamor is in favor of France, and the excitement, perhaps, ungovernable. The Belgian Chambers have been called to meet on Monday next.

Although perhaps unnecessary, a dispatch from Washington officially reiterates the statement that Gen. SHERIDAN applied for a leave of absence and went abroad merely as an observer of events, and as a private individual. The North German steamer Leipzig arrived at Baltimore yesterday, from Bremen. A Scandinavian meeting was held at Chicago on Wednesday evening, at which resolutions favoring France were adopted.

A dispatch from Jackson, Miss., states that Hon. ALBERT T. MORGAN, (white,) a lawyer of some ability and a Republican Senator in the State Senate, was married on Wednesday night to Miss CARRIE HIGHGATE, (colored,) at that place. The ceremony was performed by a colored clergyman, and the event created some excitement. MORGAN was a Colonel of a Michigan regiment during the war.

The assault was made with a cane, and was caused by alleged calumnious statements made by LINCOLN against SEGAR in regard to the re-charter of the Fredericksburg and Alexandria Railway. The latter was arrested, and held to bail in the sum of $5,000, which was furnished.

France on Her Defense.

There are people who profess to see in warfare the one point on which the human race have made absolutely no progress. The hordes of primitive men who, on the strength of a more fatal kind of flint arrow-heads than their neighbors, made war on an adjacent tribe, furnish, in the opinion of such critics, an exact counterpart to the modern nations, who no sooner possess an improved fire-arm than they show an unbridled haste to try its effect on the field of battle. Admitting the radically barbarous principle that underlies all warfare, it is a very noticeable fact that each successive outbreak of hostilities finds the belligerents more desirous than ever of setting themselves right with the rest of the world in regard to the purity of the motives that impelled them to fight. Of the two nations now engaged in actual conflict, France has assuredly been the most severely arraigned at the bar of civilization and humanity. Even in quarters where she might reasonably have expected sympathy on the score of previous alliance and mutual services, the flimsy pretext on which she entered into the quarrel has caused other grounds on which it may have become inevitable to be lost sight of, and thus she has been forced to occupy, in the estimation of other nations, the position of actual aggressor, and therefore of the Power directly responsible for the contest now in progress.

The attempts already made by the French Government to vindicate the technical justice of its declaration of war against Prussia have been but partially successful. They have all virtually resolved themselves into the statement that the growing ascendency of Prussia was dangerous to the freedom of Germany, to the existence of Austria, to the safety of France, and, therefore, to the peace of Europe. The Germans have already given the most emphatic rebuff to foreign intervention in their affairs by hastening to enroll themselves without reserve or hesitation under the banner of the King of Prussia. Austria has probably already begun to pray to be saved from such exhibitions of friendly concern, and Europe generally has unequivocally expressed its conviction that France would have had a much stronger claim to the title of a peace-maker had she accepted the mediation of neutral Powers which was so strongly pressed upon her. Apparently chafing under what they consider a grievous misapprehension, the French Cabinet return once more to the task of self-defense, and to judge by the sample transmitted by telegraph, have emitted another elaborate vindication of the position whose ultimate settlement now rests with the strongest battalions.

All unprejudiced observers have already concluded that France has a much stronger case against Prussia on the general basis of a rivalry which only the sword could settle, than on any special point on which she chose to join issue with that Power. The diplomacy of Berlin has, in fact, been more than a match for that of Paris, and the somewhat declamatory sentences quoted from the Duke of GRAMMONT'S circular do not tend to raise our estimate either of the ability or the candor of the late foreign policy of France. It is doubtless perfectly true that proposals for mutual disarmament were made by France to Prussia, but most people will be inclined to think, as Count BISMARCK seems to have done, that the sincerity of these proposals was open to question. "Preoccupied" as she may have been "with the development of her political institutions," the fact is now patent to the world that France has been steadily preparing for a great struggle, and that when the moment arrived she was in a more advanced stage of preparation than Prussia. It is obvious that her readiness to fight had a pretty intimate connection with her opinion as to the outrage "which no nation could accept without incurring contempt." In fact, the present attempt at labored defense, like those that have preceded it, only serves to show that good as the general grounds of the quarrel may in many respects have been, its special occasion was, on the part of France, ill-chosen.

The Mystery Yet Unsolved.

The Coroner's investigation, yesterday, contributed little to the solution of the mystery which still enshrouds the Nathan murder. But it threw some additional light upon points that have been controverted, upset some stories that have been industriously circulated, and to a certain extent cleared the way for the more exhaustive inquiry which has yet to come.

First, as to the two carpenters who were at work in the house on the day preceding the murder. Both seem completely absolved from suspicion. They fully explain their whereabouts, verify their statements clearly, and pass unscathed through a very searching investigation. Their testimony is in other respects interesting. The early statements in regard to the ease with which, during the day time, ingress and egress might be effected, unobserved, are confirmed. There seems, indeed, to have been an inexplicable remissness in this respect on the part of those charged with the safe keeping of the house. And, entrance once effected, the facilities for concealment were unusually great. Coalbins down-stairs, closets and a tank upstairs, were available without difficulty. These witnesses never saw in any part of the house the iron "dog" with which the murder is supposed to have been effected. The allegation that it had been used some time previous by ship carpenters who were employed to caulk the stable floor, is disproved.

Yet more prevalent rumors respecting Mr. WASHINGTON NATHAN are corrected by the testimony of the patrolman, whom the sons, FREDERICK and WASHINGTON, jointly called after the discovery of the murder. They were together upon the door-steps at the time—both undressed, The socks of one were blood-stained, and his shirt-front was largely smeared with blood. But it was FREDERICK, not WASHINGTON, whose socks and shirt were thus stained. So far as the policeman saw, WASHINGTON was without spot or stain. We do not adduce the fact to transfer from one brother to the other the horrible suspicion which sensation-mongers have persistently cultivated, but to correct an almost universal misapprehension upon a point concerning which there has been believed to be no room for doubt. A suggestive fact, now for the first time stated, is that the bloody foot-prints which formed so distinct a track down stairs and across the marble floor of the hall to the front door—all led one way. There were no foot-steps tending upstairs, or elsewhere than toward the door. The stories about distinct finger-marks, or other traces of blood, here and there, are now pronounced fiction. The door itself was closed a few seconds before the patrolman was called in. He had just passed the door, and saw that it was shut. One of the sons—the officer cannot say which—seems to have had a different opinion, which, however, he did not attempt to maintain against the policeman's positive statement. The same officer passed the house at 1½, and again at 4½, on the same morning, and on both occasions, having tried the door, as required by the rules of the force, found it fast.

Three hours, it will be observed, elapsed between the two periods at which the officer passed the house. The extent of his beat made more frequent passing-by impossible. The circumstance strikingly exemplifies the inadequacy of the present force to meet the obvious wants of the City. A locality that for three consecutive hours, at the most critical part of the night, is without the visits of a policeman, affords inviting ground for burglar or assassin.

The Coroner has still before him the most essential features of his inquiry. These he must scrutinize and expose with great care, and, withal, fearless impartiality, or his work will be held to be undone. It is to be regretted that an adjournment of the inquiry until Monday has been rendered necessary, for certainly much very important evidence is even now available. The sooner all the facts of the case are made known the better. Up to this moment the official contributions to the stock of positive knowledge upon the shocking subject have been scanty and inconclusive.

Weapons of the Two Armies

Nothing is more natural than that reports precisely contradictory of each other should reach us concerning the efficiency of the weapons of the French and Prussian Armies. We printed on Wednesday a telegraphic dispatch epitomizing an article from the London Times, in which it is argued that the French arm, the Chassepot, on account of its fouling speedily, will prove far less effective than the needle-gun. On the same page we printed extracts from the Parisian namesake of this journal, the Temps, setting forth that the needle-gun must necessarily, from its construction, foul sooner than the Chassepot, and that consequently the French must possess in this respect an immense advantage. The comparative merit of the two weapons will soon be, if it has not already been, put to a crucial test. In the meantime it is hardly necessary to point out that in all human probability the Prussian Government has made numerous secret experiments with the Chassepot, and that it is quite certain the French authorities have done the same thing by the needle-gun. Some years have elapsed since both weapons were invented, and that the two armies now facing each other would ultimately have to confront them has been nearly as certain as that the sun shines. It is absurd under such circumstances to suppose that the qualities of either gun are to burst upon the leaders to whom they are opposed, in the nature of a surprise.

The finesse attributed to the Berlin Government as regards the explosive bullets of the Baden troops, should also be taken with grains of allowance. As the story is related by the Metz correspondent of the Siècle, Prussia contemplates in this matter an act of perfidy that would gain her the reprobation of the whole civilized world. Baden, we are told, refused to sign the agreement by which the five Great European Powers bound themselves not to use the explosive bullet. The theory of civilized war consists, not in killing your enemy, but in putting him hors de combat. Ordinary projectiles wound far oftener than they kill, so that with them this end is attained. But with the explosive balls every man hit is killed. Now, Prussia and France are debarred from using these terrible implements, but Baden, who fights side by side with Prussia, can use them at pleasure. It is threatened, in retaliation, that France will use a similar projectile, the exact nature of which has been kept a secret, but which is said to be fearfully destructive. We believe that neither side will use explosive bullets at all; since, apart from any considerations of humanity, the injuries inflicted by both would neutralize each other, while a common odium would rest on both.

The opinion seems for the moment to be gaining ground that the new weapons, instead of hastening, will have a tendency to postpone decisive results. It is thought that, inasmuch as the old theory of the writers on war, imputing the advantage to the assailant, is rendered obsolete by these weapons, which, it is claimed, rather throw superiority on the side of the defense, a campaign must consist of sieges and tactical combinations, rather than of swift and conclusive engagements in the open field. No such lightning movements as those of NAPOLEON the Great, which, beginning at Jena and Auerstadt, Oct. 14, 1806, placed him in Berlin in less than a fortnight after, are now, it is urged, to be looked for. Already reports reach us from both sides that the Prussian troops are intrenching themselves, and fringing their elaborate system of fortresses by earthworks such as were found so useful in our late civil war. If it be true that the French field artillery is as superior as by some it is supposed to be, the wisdom of this precaution becomes manifest. It has been thought that the mitrailleuse, which discharges perhaps forty bullets through as many tubes, would really prove no more effective than an ordinary cannon that should throw an equal number of missiles through a single tube; and the allegation is doubtless true that the experience of previous wars tends to lessen expectation of great results from complicated forms of light artillery. On the other hand the affair of Saarbrück, if we can trust the French accounts, shows that the new arm may prove of vital consequence at decisive moments of the war. The unlooked for hesitancy prior to a general engagement may be owing to a variety of causes, and apprehension of the unknown powers of the mitrailleuse may possibly be among the number.

A New Solution of the Educational Problem.

Bold as have been the experiments of English legislation during the past five years, it would be difficult to find among them a measure more original and comprehensive than the new Education bill which has just passed through the House of Commons. For thirty years it has been the disgrace of England that she stood alone among the progressive nations of the world in having no truly national scheme of education. The State afforded, indeed, a certain proportion of aid to schools established by the various religious denominations, but it made no provision for that steadily increasing part of the population which these failed to reach. The squabbles of Anglicans, Secularists and Dissenters have hitherto rendered impossible the adoption of a truly comprehensive scheme of national education, and but for the advent to power of an exceptionally strong Liberal Cabinet, the settlement of the question might even yet have been indefinitely postponed. To Mr. FORSTER, who holds in Mr. GLADSTONE'S Ministry the virtual rank of Minister of Education, belongs the chief credit of the inception and successful passage of the present bill, which is, in many respects, a highly interesting legislative experiment.

Its most notable feature, and the one that has been productive of the greatest amount of discussion, is its mode of meeting the religious difficulty. In the words of an English journal, it places "every creed and every enemy of all creeds at liberty to exert itself or himself to the uttermost to propagate its or his opinions at discretion; to attract if it can the whole youth of the district to listen to its ideas;" while all sects are "equally forbidden to oppress the conscience of any who, desiring education, fear the spiritual influence of those who bestow it." Let any sect, association or individual establish a public school, and they have only to comply with certain provisions as to school-pence, the hours of religious instruction, and the requisites of Government inspection, to claim from the State one-half of their annual expenditure. The quality and availability of their secular instruction being satisfactory, they are allowed to communicate any religious teaching, or none at all. If the former, it must be given at certain hours defined by Government; and under what is called a "time-table conscience clause," parents may at such times secure the absence of their children. In localities where no such denominational schools exist, or where the accommodation provided by them is deemed by the central authority inadequate to the wants of the population, the rate-payers are to be summoned to elect a School Board to supply the want by the erection of fresh schools, and to manage their affairs when erected. Into the election of these Boards a principle new to English legislation has been introduced—that of cumulative voting. Every elector has a right to vote for such number of members as may be required to constitute the Board, or to fill up vacancies that may occur in it, but he can put the entire weight of his vote to the credit of a single candidate, or otherwise distribute it as he sees fit. By such a plan of minority representation, all parties can enter into the constitution of the School Boards, and the local rates which they are empowered to levy will thus be contributed with greater willingness. In these schools, which will be supported half by local taxation and half by State funds, no religious creed or formula can be taught, and the reading of the Bible, "without note or comment," is the only directly religious exercise provided for. Even at this, the operation of the conscience clause provides for the voluntary abstention of children, should their parents so desire.

Another and highly important feature of the bill is the permission it accords to every duly elected School Board to make the attendance of children in their district compulsory. This is acknowledged as a purely tentative clause, and its extension or abrogation will depend very much on the results of its early enactment. To provide against the local authorities nullifying the intention of the bill by penuriousness or incapacity, the Education Department reserve the power of dissolving the School Board of any district when they see fit, and ordering a new election. In the event of continued inefficiency, they have the power of taking into their own hands the educational affairs of any district and of managing them by a Board appointed by themselves. Altogether the bill is of a character at once so sweeping in its reforms, and yet so eminently constructive in its aims, as to mark a new phase of British legislation, and to form in its future operation a subject of extreme interest to all friends of political and social progress.

The Weather and the Public Health.

The records of the Board of Health for last week showed an excess of 351 deaths over the corresponding period of last year. This increase is more than accounted for by the further statement that 340 children under two years of age died from Summer complaint, and eighty-five persons from sun-stroke, or the direct effects of heat. The same proportionate results are observed in Philadelphia, and therefore there is a basis of investigation into the influence upon health of the heated terms through which we are passing, irrespective of mere locality. It will be noticed that if the exceptional mortality from the two causes named be deducted from the general result in this City, the number of deaths would be less than usual at this time. The conclusion to be arrived at is, that while persons of weak physical condition are peculiarly susceptible to attack, those of average healthfulness are enabled to sustain the unusual strain upon the system caused by the present heated term. In other words, those who succumb to the heat are in too low a physical condition to resist congestion of the brain, by the healthy activity of their circulation and the soundness of their nervous system. This depressed state of the body, this weakness, may be due to a variety of causes. In adults it may come of the constant, though not necessarily excessive, use of alcoholic stimulants, by which the tissues and blood are kept in a state of chronic inflammation, which is slowly though surely destructive of their substance. A certain proportion of the victims to excessive heat are young persons to whom a resort to stimulants cannot be attributed. But there are other errors of diet which are extremely serious, and to which young people give little attention. The close confinement, also, in unhealthy workshops, and in ill-ventilated and crowded houses, is likely to be very hurtful at the period when youth is changing into manhood; and physical mischief is done which deprives the sufferer of the power to rally from the exhaustion produced by atmospheric heat.

In the case of very young infants, the influence of bad and insufficient air and ill-selected food must necessarily be more fatal. These are always in operation, but when the weakness inseparable from want of rest and the great drain of perspiration is added, there is a mortality which is alarming. The figures which the New-York and Philadelphia Boards publish on this point convey a lesson which ought not to be disregarded; and the remark also applies to the large amount of sickness and death from sunstrokes. They show that there is an unduly large proportion of population which is in a deteriorated and feeble condition in these cities. Under ordinary circumstances, and where the individual is favorably situated in respect of air and diet, the mere state of the atmosphere has comparatively little effect. But the long list of mortality brought to notice week after week, while at the same time no epidemic diseases are apparent, is a fair proof of the large number of persons who are not so situated. And this forms a sad commentary upon the misery and discomfort which are continually warring upon the crowded population by which we are surrounded.

Progress of the War.

In our cable dispatches will be found some suggestive items, showing the growth of a conviction that it will be next to impossible to localize the present struggle between France and Prussia. The sensitive indicator of English sentiment presented in the price of consols is one evidence of the increasing strength of the national apprehension that a position of neutrality will be short-lived, while the nervous anxiety shown in both Houses of Parliament to get a clue to the foreign policy of the Government, if, indeed, it has any, furnishes another. The English Press has exhibited a perfectly surprising unanimity on the question of England's irrevocable obligations to preserve at all hazards the independence of Belgium, and when contrasted with the pusillanimous foreign policy of the nation during the last decade, it sounds somewhat strangely to hear the British fleet again spoken of as "the second line of European defense." That the French envoy who is reported to have gone to London to assure the English Government that Belgium is in no danger of being annexed just at present, should have received a "cool reception," is extremely probable. France was on paper as much a party to the guaranteed neutrality of Belgium as England was, and a message like that sent by the Duke of GRAMMONT is pretty nearly equivalent to a declaration by one partner in a business concern to another that, although he had once intended to rob him, he had now changed his mind, and that, therefore, he may dismiss all apprehensions.

The rapid outline, given in another dispatch, of the presumed destination of Gen. MCMAHON and his Algerians, seems more distinguished by boldness than probability. A "dash by Carlsruhe and Heidelberg" means running the gauntlet of the troops centred around the fortress of Mannheim; and, however easy it may be on paper to "leave Mayence on the left" the arsenal at Frankfort would involve a sufficiently close proximity to the former to necessitate a collision with the hundred and eighty thousand men stationed there under Prince FREDERICK CHARLES, while the existence of a strongly intrenched camp in the neighborhood of Frankfort might probably interfere with the success of the Zouaves in their assumed programme of cutting the railroad communication "between Baden and the Rhine." At present it may safely be said, that there is next to no data for forming any opinion relative to the probable movements of the troops of either army, beyond what we have previously expressed.

The Republican State Committee, which met at Saratoga, yesterday, has complied with the predominating wish of the party by fixing an early day for the assembling of the Convention. The 7th of September is the date selected. The Committee disposed of the difficulties in the Seventh District of this City by ordering a revision of the enrollment; the contestants from the Ninth District effected a compromise; and in regard to the Fifteenth District, no action was deemed necessary.

Not often has the Bank of England advanced its rate of discount so rapidly as now,—and never except in the presence of very grave emergencies. The minimum rate is now six per cent.—a fact that sufficiently indicates the force and extent of the financial complications, and the apprehensions that prevail in regard to the immediate future. Hope as we may, it is impossible to ignore the probable effect of such a state of things upon the finance and business of this country.

Dom FERNANDO, of Portugal, has been already so frequently mentioned in connection with the throne of Spain, and the difficulties attending his election have already appeared so insurmountable, that the present rumor of his acceptance of the candidature must be received with caution. An impression prevails in Europe that the revival of Prince LEOPOLD'S claims to the suffrages of the Cortes will be one of the results to be anticipated from the Prussian success in the present war. Unless it be to avoid the establishment by France, in the event of victory remaining with her, of Prince ALFONSO on the throne lately abdicated by his mother, the King-makers of Spain can have very little to gain, at the present crisis, by raising the question of their royal succession so soon after their late perilous experiment. Should the present rumor turn out to be a fact, it will, at least, show conclusively that France will look in vain either for allies or sympathies to her neighbors in the Peninsula.

The Evening Post is not unreasonable when it asks for an explanation of the reference to an alleged "United States protectorate of San Domingo," which has appeared in recent Dominican correspondence, that of the TIMES included. All the letter-writers convey an impression that BAEZ, and his friends, rely upon an American "protectorate" to sustain them against Dominican discontent; and the Post properly asks:

"Is it true that the United States have agreed to 'protect' Dominica that we have established a 'protectorate' in San Domingo? When was this done? By whose authority? Why was it kept a secret? What does it bind us to? A good many persons would like to know something about this."

We cannot believe that a protectorate has been seriously contemplated, or that anything has been said or done by our Administration which can justify BAEZ in looking for American help as against his own people. The fate of the treaty in the Senate is meanwhile conclusive, and BAEZ must take his chance. If the Dominicans are eager for annexation, American protection is not required to shield him from his enemies. And if they are averse to annexation, we have no right to assist him in carrying out a policy at variance with their wishes.

Another instance of carelessness and fraud in corporate management! This time Baltimore and West Virginia are tainted—not New-York. The President of the North-western Virginia Railroad, better known as the Petersburg Branch of the Baltimore and Ohio, has been in the habit of leaving blank certificates of stock, bearing his signature, in the hands of the Secretary. An over-issue of stock, amounting in round figures to three hundred thousand dollars, is the result. Would the President in question intrust his check-book, signed in blank, to one of his clerks? If he would, he is not a fit man for the office. If he would not, why should he act with less consideration as the guardian of stockholders' interests?

If President GRANT is willing that the recent Fenian trials, conducted with such a display of official energy and judicial decorum, shall be reduced to a contemptible farce, he will comply with the request for the immediate pardon of O'NEIL and his convicted associates. To liberate them now, after having been sentenced to imprisonment for violating the laws of the land, would be to confess that there was no honesty in the effort to prevent the "invasion" of Canada. The punishment imposed upon O'NEIL & Co. is not excessive, and there can be no abatement of it without adding to the mischief they have already done. These men cannot plead ignorance of the law, nor can they divest themselves of responsibility for leading others to set its provisions at defiance. The President owes more to the nation's neutrality at this critical moment, than to Fenian impostors.

The authorities of the New-York Post-office are making arrangements to facilitate their business and add to the convenience of the public, but there are some points to which they do not appear, so far, to have given attention. There is much need of the greater diffusion over the City of the money-order system. There are many localities which are business centres in themselves, and between which small remittances are constantly being exchanged, in addition to payments to and from the country. A few branch offices at which orders might be issued and paid would be of great service. The facilities for the sale of postage stamps need also to be increased. Many tradesmen would be willing to keep a sufficient stock if a small percentage were allowed them. Newspapers, too, are now mailed by exposing them, like foundlings, to the tender mercies of the passers by, which does not seem a very sensible process. The Post-office chiefs would gratify many people if they would consider these things.

There seems to have been some negligence in framing the bill organizing the new Bureau of Justice at Washington. The plan of consolidation was a good one, and will undoubtedly work well as soon as the organization gets fairly in operation, but its authors should have known that the transition would be attended with difficulty. Provision should have been made for a gradual transfer of the old business, in all cases where the old officers were not transferred, as in the case of the cotton cases pending in the Court of Claims. In the absence of this the whole business—involving over 700 cases, and $15,000,000—is thrown into confusion, which will result in delay and useless expense, to say nothing of the loss to the parties—all of which a little forethought would have averted.

The old discussion concerning the proper relation of height and weight is revived by Nature, which furnishes some tables setting forth what the symmetrical and healthful ratio should be. A person five feet high, according to this and other authorities, should weigh 143 pounds, and there should be five pounds additional weight for each additional inch in height. Assumptions of this sort may have their use, and, as the collated results of a great number of observations, they are certainly interesting. Still, are such arbitrary formulas in any other sense trustworthy? Weight depends not on flesh alone, but on muscular and osseous development. A hardy and big-boned laborer of five feet four may, therefore, healthfully carry a greater weight of bone and muscle, and consequently likewise of flesh, than a strumous sedentary of five feet ten. Circumstances alter cases here as they do so often elsewhere; there is apt to be danger in laying down inflexible laws, a believe in which may cause needless apprehension or injurious practice. Obesity may be, no doubt, and has been, healthily cured; but there is a risk of spoiling digestion by the process which may often make the remedy more hurtful than the disease.

Report alleges that new complications are arising with reference to the municipal offices of Richmond. A remembrance of the calamity which ended the contest between the rival Mayors, might be supposed to disincline the people of that city for any further difficulties of that kind. The whole matter ought quietly and amicably to be submitted to proper legal adjudication.

The eastward movement of grain and flour, by canal, since the opening of navigation, has steadily fallen off from last year. At Buffalo, according to one report, the deficiency on the 1st of August was 2,628,253 bushels. The receipts of tolls are, of course, materially affected. At Buffalo, they are already $260,000 less than last year, and on the whole line of the canal there must be a decline of over half a million. The large foreign demand for breadstuffs, which is anticipated during the Autumn months, may prevent a further decrease; but it is hardly possible that, at present rates, the receipts can be brought up to last year's figures.

We are sorry to notice that JEFFERSON DAVIS has broken the decorous reserve which he has maintained since his release from prison, and that he has taken to speech-making. He has, as yet, said nothing particularly offensive; nevertheless there is a questionable taste in his acceptance of popular demonstrations, and in the fact that he makes speeches in response. When Southern people gather about him, and do him honor, it is as the official head of the rebellion that he is recognized. Such demonstrations cannot be ascribed to personal popularity, for no prominent Southern leader has less of it than Mr. DAVIS. With Gen. LEE it is different. He is thoroughly and personally popular all over the South; yet he is careful not to permit any public expression of feeling toward himself. Mr. DAVIS might advantageously follow his example.

In the House of Commons, the Ecclesiastical Tests bill was debated, Mr. NEWDEGATE airing his "no Popery" sentiments. The Cheyennes—Leading Chiefs Striving for Peace—An Indian Census—Assignments of the Commissioners.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—Information has been received that BIG HORSE, the Cheyenne Chief, with over twenty lodges, will be at the Agency in a few days; also, that BIG JAKE will soon follow, with all he may induce to accompany him. There is an abundance of Indian testimony that BIG JAKE has been unremitting in his exertions to restrain Indian hostilities. There have been repeated invitations sent to the Cheyennes, who are yet out, to come in. They have been encamped on the South Fork of Red River, some 300 miles from the Agency. LITTLE RAVEN is at the Agency, keeping a sharp lookout, lest he be taken by surprise by hostile Indians, who, he says, are very wise, and need close watching. He requested the agent to inform the Commissioner that it was unreasonable that he and his tribe should be deprived of arms while those tribes at war were able to obtain them in abundance. He also claims that the faith and promise pledged by the Government in regard to mules stolen from his people by white men have not been fulfilled. Agent DARLINGTON intends to proceed promptly and take the census of all the Indians in his department. The members of the Indian Peace Commission will be employed during the Summer as follows: Messrs. BRUNOT and CAMPBELL are appointed to see the Sioux of SPOTTED TAIL and RED CLOUD's bands; to get reservations for them and to superintend the distribution of their annuity goods. Messrs. STEWART and DODGE are assisting Commissioner PARKER in the purchase of annuity goods. Messrs. COLLYER and FARWELL will visit the Pacific slope in September and look after Indian matters generally in California, Oregon and Washington Territory.

Textile Fabrics—Opening of the Exposition at Indianapolis, Ind.—Tobacco Fair at Cincinnati—Proposed Reception of a Catholic Prelate—Large Fire at Columbus, Ohio.

C. TURKINGTON, President of the Board of Trade, made the opening address of welcome. He was followed by Mayor MACAULAY, who extended a hearty welcome to the visitors on the part of the city. GEORGE S. BOWEN, President of the Association, responded. Gov. BAKER next spoke briefly. He was pleased to see so great an exhibition of manufacturing skill. The people of Indiana welcome all manufacturers. And he was gratified to learn of the interest he saw manifested by the Southern manufacturers. The industrial interests of the South and West were one. He joined the Mayor in extending a hearty welcome to the city and State. Addresses were also made by J. C. STEVENS, of Augusta, Ga., President of the Woolgrowers' Association, and J. B. STEBBINS, of Detroit; T. B. NORTON, Secretary of the General Association of Home Industry; JOHN S. HAYES, of Boston, Secretary of the National Association of Woolen Manufacturers, and several others, made brief addresses. A considerable amount of goods and machinery arrived today. There is every indication that the Exposition will be a complete success. The attendance today at the Exposition was quite large. All the goods and machinery have arrived and been placed in position. The principal part of the machinery was put in operation in the rink this morning. The Eagle Manufacturing Company of Georgia exhibits new articles of cotton blankets, very superior in quality. Railway Dishonesty—Over-Issue of Stock in Baltimore—A Singular Affair in Louisville—Reported Serious Riot in Kentucky.

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 4.—There were rumors, yesterday, of an over-issue of the stock of the North-western Virginia Railroad Company, commonly known as the Parkersburg Branch of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, which is leased and worked by the latter Company. The over-issue is stated in the morning papers to amount to $300,000, made by the Secretary of the Company, JOHN L. CRAWFORD, who has resigned his office. The amount at which the over-issue is fixed is a supposition merely, as no statement has been made by Mr. CRAWFORD, and the directors of the road have not concluded their examination. The over-issue is all hypothecated in Baltimore at about $15 on the share, the par value of which is $50. CRAWFORD, the Secretary of the Company, was the confidential clerk of the banking-house of ALEXANDER BROWN & SONS for many years. Ex-Senator VAN WINKLE, of West Virginia, President of the Company, it is stated, intrusted to the Secretary blank certificates of stock bearing his signature.

MORGAN, (white,) a Republican Senator in the Mississippi Legislature, to Miss CARRIE HIGHGATE (colored.) The ceremony was performed by a colored minister. The couple left immediately for Cleveland, Ohio, Mr. MORGAN's former home, via Louisville. The affair naturally creates a sensation in the community. POLITICAL.

THE FALL CAMPAIGN.

Republican State Central Committee—Meeting at Saratoga—The State Convention—The New-York Troubles.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 4.—The Republican State Committee had a six hours' session at Congress Hall, today. A State Convention is called to meet at Saratoga Springs on the 7th of September. HAMILTON HARRIS was appointed to prepare an address to be published with the call, which is the same in terms as the one issued last year. Regarding the contests between the Seventh, Ninth and Fifteenth Districts in New York City, the Committee heard arguments and decided to have a revision of the enrollment in the Seventh District. The Ninth District contestants compromised, and each side will have half of the committees. In the case of the Fifteenth District no action is deemed necessary. On the occasion of the serenade, last evening, at the Grand Union Hotel, the following speeches were made:

SPEECH OF SENATOR CONKLING.

I am assured that the motive of this visit is personal in part. I hope it is. In the unceasing round of politics, nothing is so good as the kindness and regard of those whose esteem we value. In return for your presence, I offer my thanks and well wishes to you all. You are Republicans—I am a Republican. We were never more earnest Republicans than now. Your presence is gratifying because it means more than personal regard for any man. It means readiness to carry the old flag, with the old dash and determination, and to win the old victories. The unity of the Republican Party, concord and harmony among Republicans everywhere, is the meaning of us all. The work of the Republican Party is not finished, nor is there any other party able or willing to finish it. The Republican Party has done much, indeed, more than any political organization in history. It has rescued a great Government from conspirators and traitors; it has conducted successfully the greatest and most costly war of the human race; it has administered government and finance in a period of transactions and events more complex, vast and novel, than any in the annals of recorded time. Beyond all this, it has emancipated four million slaves and placed them on their feet clothed with the garment of American citizenship. It has recreated half a continent, it has established liberty and right everywhere, and made the name of America respected, if not terrible, among the nations of the earth. War has gone from us; its bloody shadow falls on France—its tramp rocks thrones, and kings are sea-sick now. Perhaps war has gone with avenging hand to the strife-torn man who dominates the land of LAFAYETTE—perhaps war strikes the hour for the Emperor who plotted and schemed against us in the day of our trial. However this may be, God grant that no harm may come to Germany. Germany sympathized with us, the sons of Germany fought for us, and cheers of victory went up in the German tongue from the burning battle-fields of our rebellion. Germany's Constitution is like ours, Prussia believes as we do, in education for all, and Republicans everywhere join me in the hope that no harm is in store for Germany. Returning to our own land, war as I said, has gone. America, blest with the opportunities and charged with the responsibilities of a dear-bought peace, is either to be crushed by the weight of her magnificent destiny, or to rise to a height of civilization and grandeur which the nationalities never reached, and the centuries never know. In the career before us, as in every free system, Government is to be directed by political organizations. The Republican party is now directing national affairs, and it has never failed in the presence of emergencies or events. It cannot be spared, the nation needs it yet. It has a Congress of which it does not become me here to speak. It has a President who has never disappointed a just expectation, and who, as a patriot, a soldier, a President and a man, has earned the confidence and admiration of his countrymen. Turning from the greatest of military commands and of military successes, he assumed the most complex and difficult work of civil trusts, and he has so borne himself in his great office that every reasonable expectation has been realized. Were we ever stronger abroad than now? In what has the Administration failed at home? The revenue has been honestly collected—so honestly, that for fifteen months, with sources of revenue curtailed by Congress, the receipts have exceeded by sixty-six millions the receipts for the corresponding period under the preceding Administration. The public debt has been rapidly diminished, the public credit lifted up at home and abroad, and yet taxes have been dismissed until but few remain. Eighty millions of taxes have just been dispensed with, fifty-seven millions of internal taxes and twenty-three of customs duties. Is there more that men had a right to expect? Such stewardship deserves, and will receive the public approbation. New-York's great seal should attest the general approval, and with concord among members of the same household of faith, New-York's great seal will attest it. We have a last Congress of Congress under which an election may once more be held in the City of New-York—a law seeking to substitute a fair election for that scandalous farce which has so often been enacted on election days. The provisions I speak of, will call into being inspectors to watch the registry, the vote, and, above all, the count, and the Marshal is empowered to preserve order and safety at the polls. With a fair election, and votes fairly counted, we need only conciliation and unity among ourselves, and then action, earnest action, and New-York will pronounce for the Republican Party and the Administration of Gen. GRANT. To this end, let us all work. But I do not mean to make a speech, and, renewing my acknowledgments, I bid you all good night.

SPEECH OF HON. HORACE GREELEY.

MY FRIENDS: I presume I am indebted to the kindness of one of your number only for this attention, or whatever it may be called, and I will simply say a few words to you in response. Perhaps the fact that I am rather an older politician, and an older editor, than some of my contemporaries, is the reason why I am singled out from among the great number who are here tonight, for something like a personal compliment; and I will therefore speak to the younger persons who are coming after me in my long career, and will suggest some considerations which may be useful to those who are now coming upon the stage of action. It is commonly believed that the life of a nactive politician leads him to grasp some temporary reward or aggrandizement, but the end of it is dust and ashes. I wish to give my testimony, as that of one nearly sixty years of age, and who for forty years has been actively engaged in political strife, and that without holding office or attaining wealth or position, that I feel that my career has been a satisfactory one. I rejoice to think that my pen has had some little influence in effectually settling some of the great questions of the age. I rejoicingly feel that, if my name shall be known at all in the next century, men will say of me, "He was one of those who fought against human Slavery until human Slavery disappeared from this country." That is to me a proud satisfaction, that, in the turmoil and tumult of political strife, there has been something more than mere agitation. Through years of political contention there has been developed a sentiment which has swept human Slavery out of our country, and will soon sweep it off the face of the earth. I feel also that the great subject of popular education has made substantial progress in my time—progress in that which I feel sure is the right direction. We have in this State, as they have in other States, come by slow degrees to a clear comprehension of the truth that the education of all men's children in this Republic is every man's interest and every man's duty—that I need a common school in my district, not because I have or have not children, but because it is my interest that all children should be educated. Then, as to the great temperance reform —probably not yet comprehended, even by its advocates. When I think of the large proportion of the American people who have banded themselves together in a common resolve not to drink and not to incite others to drink, because they believe our country better without strong drink than with it, I feel that there is in such action not a moral purpose merely, but a moral attitude which may well challenge the admiration of the intelligent and reflecting. It proves that there is in a Republic like ours elements of progress, and elements of improvement, which will tend ever and ever to the purification and elevation of the masses. I twice in former years traveled over Europe, and I found there many things better than we have here; but when I had crossed the British Channel, I traveled, perhaps, two thousand miles on the Continent, yet never once heard of a public meeting to promote education or temperance, or any general or social reform. Now is it not something to be citizens in a Republic like this, wherein men and women in the humblest stations in life are considering by what means they may promote the good of their fellows, and make the world better for their having lived in it? I rejoice that so many great and good works have been promoted—some of them I may say completed—in my day. The success of these efforts has made easier and secure the triumphs which you in your time will be called to achieve. In the faith that you will be found equal to your high responsibilities, and that your victories will surpass in beneficence those which have been accomplished, I bid you good night.

Probable Republican Victory in Tennessee—The North Carolina Election.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 4.—The election returns received at the Chronicle office up to a late hour, show a general Republican triumph throughout East Tennessee in today's election for Judicial officers. The majorities in this district are very decided and foreshadow triumphs in the important elections to follow in November.

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 4.—Though there was much excitement today the election passed off quietly. No returns have yet been received. There were some attempts made to intimidate Conservative negroes. An altercation took place this afternoon between an Englishman and HARRIS, the colored candidate for Congress, during which the latter was knocked down by the former for calling him a European convict. Considerable excitement ensued, but it was soon quieted by the Mayor. Both political parties are sanguine of success.

Temperance State Ticket in Michigan—The Kentucky Election—Politics in Virginia—Congressional Nominations in Illinois.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 4.—The Temperance Mass Convention of the State at Jackson, yesterday, put in nomination a full State ticket and adopted resolutions affirming the Chicago platform adopted last Fall, and favoring the gradual payment of the national debt.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Aug. 4.—The election returns from most of the counties are coming in slowly. As a general thing the Democrats have elected their ticket.

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 4.—The Conservative Central Executive Committee have issued an address recommending the postponement of Congressional nominations until the State is redistricted. They oppose the entangling of the Conservatives in any party alliance, and recommend that the party in Virginia support that national party which upholds the banner of constitutional liberty, equal laws and a just administration.

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—The Republican Congressional Convention of the Eighth Illinois District succeeded, yesterday, in nominating Col. JONATHAN MERRIAM, of Tazewell County, on the 186th ballot. The Democratic Congressional Convention of the Tenth Illinois District met at Carlinville, yesterday, and on the seventh ballot nominated Judge E. Y. RICE, of Montgomery County, for Congress.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 4.—Gen. R. C. SCHENCK was renominated for Congress by the Republican Convention of the Third District, which met at Middletown today.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Another term of MONTGOMERY BLAIR in Congress is apprehended.

The Democracy of Georgia hold their State Convention at Atlanta on the 18th inst.

According to the Cincinnati Commercial Judge WINANS, of Xenia, Ohio, declines a renomination for Congress.

The Republican Member of Congress for the Ohio Fourth District, Hon. JOB E. STEVENSON, has declined a renomination.

The Democrats of Colorado have nominated GEORGE W. MILLER, of Denver, for delegate to Congress.

CASSIUS M. CLAY is to speak in Colorado Territory, in advocacy of Republicanism, in the approaching canvass.

A working men's candidate for Governor of California, is among the possibilities; PHILIP A. ROACH is spoken of.

In the Sixth Ohio District, the Republican candidate for Congress is Hon. JOHN A. SMITH, the present representative, who has been renominated.

All the States except Oregon, New-Hampshire, Connecticut and Rhode Island hold elections this Fall. United States Senators are to be chosen in sixteen States.

The Democratic disposition to run HUMPHREY MARSHALL, of Kentucky, for Congress, is checked by the difficulty in finding "two districts to unite on him" as he would require two seats.

Hon. A. F. PERRY is spoken of as the nominee of the Republicans of the First Congressional District of Ohio, although a Cincinnati paper regards Mr. SAMUEL EGGLESTON as the favorite of the "ring."

The Massachusetts temperance "irreconcilables" propose a Convention in Boston, Aug. 17, to organize an independent prohibitory party, and name a State ticket, which shall be entirely disconnected from existing societies and party affiliations.

The Democratic newspapers predict defeat for Hon. A. W. TAYLOR, the Republican candidate for Congress in the Twenty-first Pennsylvania District, (COVODE's,) based on the assumption that Mr. COVODE is the only man who can carry the district for the Republicans. We shall see.

The Republican Convention of the Fourth Congressional District of Missouri, which nominated Capt. HAVENS, editor of the Springfield Patriot, adopted the following:

Resolved, That we are in favor of the tariffs to such an extent as will furnish a revenue to the Government, and of such a readjustment of the duties as will do justice alike to the agricultural and manufacturing interests of the country.

The succession to Gen. SCHENCK's seat in Congress from the Third Ohio District is said to be likely to fall upon Hon. A. G. MCBURNEY, formerly Lieutenant-Governor of the State. This gentleman, has, however, published a card declining to be a candidate, which the Dayton Journal interprets to mean so long as there is any possibility that Gen. SCHENCK may accept.

A Western paper makes up the following "slate" for the Republicans of Missouri: Governor—B. GRATZ BROWN, St. Louis, of Iron County. Lieutenant-Governor—S. W. HEADLEY, Green County. Secretary of State—S. HAYS, Buchanan County. Treasurer—W. Z. DALLMEYER, Gasconade County. State Auditor—D. M. DRAPER, Montgomery County. Adjutant-General—Gen. ISAAC F. SHEPARD, St. Louis County.

In addition to the names already suggested as Republican candidates for Governor, the Rochester Democrat proposes the following: E. G. Spalding, A. S. Upham, Peter Cooper, Hamilton Fish, E. W. Leavenworth, Geo. H. Andrews, Calvin T. Hulburd, Gen. James Wood, Noah Davis, E. G. Lapham, Horace Greeley, Ezra Cornell, Robert S. Hale, Freeman Clarke, Gen. J. H. Martindale, T. M. Pomeroy, John O'Donnell, Ira Harris.

The successor to the command of the Stonewall Brigade of the rebel army, during the waning days of the Confederacy, is a candidate for Congress on the Democratic ticket, from the Eighth Virginia District. He is known as Gen. WILLIAM TERRY, and his election is considered probable, as his district, which lies in the angle of the State between North Carolina and Tennessee, contains few white Republicans and a sparse negro population.

The renomination of Mr. PORTER, of Virginia, by the Richmond District Congressional Convention, on the 3d inst., does not receive the approbation of all the Republicans of the district. The State Journal's repudiation of the action of the Convention seems to be justified by the instructions to the delegates of at least one county, Chesterfield, who were directed to "use all efforts to defeat the nomination of CHARLES H. PORTER."

The Cincinnati Times says the Louisville Courier-Journal is intensely agonized about the "great army of insolvent and rapacious plunderers," and pathetically remarks: "To the repast set apart for these voracious myriads, not one Democrat is admitted either by popular election or Executive appointment." So, after all, it is not the plundering which fills the souls of the Democracy with woe, but the fact that they are not invited to participate.

The Democratic electors of the County of Albany, N. Y., "are respectfully requested to send the same number of representatives as composed the last County Convention to a County Convention, to be held at the house of JAMES B. HOUCK, New-Salem, on Thursday, the 25th day of August, 1870, for the purpose of fixing a new basis of representation for future County Conventions, made necessary by the increase of the number of Wards in the city of Albany, and the incorporation of the city of Cohoes.

A Monster Sentenced to Death.

The Baltimore Gazette of Aug. 4 says: "The trial of JOHN HENRY SALMON for the murder of his mother and brother, which has been going on for some weeks past at Charlottesville, Va., was concluded by a verdict of guilty against the prisoner. On Saturday last the final sentence of the Court was announced as follows: 'The judgment of the Court is that you, JOHN HENRY SALMON, be hanged by the neck until you are dead; and that execution of this judgment upon you, JOHN H. SALMON, be made and done by the Sheriff of this county, on Friday, the 4th day of November next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 6 o'clock P. M. of the same day, at some suitable place in this county other than the yard adjoining the jail of this county.' The sentence was received by the prisoner with unusual calmness, he not showing the least sign of excitement or confusion, but maintaining that stoical indifference which has characterized him ever since the crime was committed."

ITALY.

The Ecclesiastical Spoliation Scheme—Attitude of the Government Toward France and Prussia—The Lighting of Florence—Manufacture of American Wines in Parts of Tuscany.

From Our Own Correspondent.

FLORENCE, Thursday, July 14, 1870.

A law has been voted this week supplimentary to that of several years ago, called by the clergy the Ecclesiastical Spoliation Scheme. The present law sweeps into the public Treasury what is left of property—and it is in the aggregate considerable—upon which the clergy live, and by which worship is supported. The Church and its servants will soon be reduced to the smallest possible allowance, and the inducement to become a priest, for any money profit accruing, will be taken away. "As poor as a church mouse," instead of "as fat as a priest," will be the phrase to be applied to the ministers of the altar. The law also reduces the number of ecclesiastics, of various degrees, at present officiating in metropolitan and parish churches. The number of canons is fixed at twelve for each cathedral—an immense reduction of those at present getting their living by repeating official litanies. The Cathedral of Florence has actually not less than sixty of this class of priests. The new step taken excites extreme indignation among the clergy, manifested in their organs and in conversation; but there is no help. These changes must cause a rapid approach to the American system, which makes the ministers of religion directly dependent upon the people for their means of support.

FINANCIAL MATTERS.

The Revenue law, so long under discussion, was voted as a whole, by a small majority, without any new incident, this week—a question disposed of which has been the cause of as much anger as weariness. The next important measure connected with finance is that of the proposed convention with the bank. The Government Party is exhibiting a little firmness, a degree of courage quite necessary, if the country is to be persuaded that there is a power somewhere ready to bear the responsibility of action, and make a trial of policy, even if it should be proved afterward that wiser councils might have been planned. What may be called a mild agitation is that which has now for object a change in the directors of affairs.

THE ATTITUDE OF ITALY ON THE WAR QUESTION.

The Marquis VISCONTI-VENOSTA, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, was, this week, called upon in Parliament to reply to inquiries concerning the attitude to be maintained by Italy in case of a French-Prussian war, and the continued French occupation of Rome, in connection with the words alleged to have been used lately by the French Minister, OLLIVER, to the effect that the Italian Kingdom is not yet well established. To the last of these inquiries, Signor VISCONTI-VENOSTA replied, that as soon as it was known here that such language had been attributed to Signor OLLIVER, although in an unofficial conversation, that functionary was written to for an explanation; the response to which was, that the conversation was not correctly reported. But there is a lingering feeling of dissatisfaction, growing out of the suspicion that the opinion attributed to the Minister is that of official circles in France. Upon the Roman question, the Minister replied that the policy of the Government would still be that of waiting, as the one most in accordance with the dignity and the interest of the nation. Certainly the actual state of things cannot contiue forever, and the Minister begged the Chamber to leave to the Government liberty of judgment and of action in dealing with a question to which its whole responsibility is pledged. Upon the Spanish King question, the Minister simply said that the good offices of Italy would be joined to those of the other Powers to the end of preserving, if possible, the peace of Europe.

THE LIGHTING OF FLORENCE.

The municipality and citizens of Florence are embarrassed with the question as to how half the city shall be lighted. A few years ago, when gas was introduced, the foolish step was taken of giving to a foreign company a monopoly for a hundred years of lighting the city within the walls. As those walls have been thrown down for the greater part of the circuit, and a belt of half a mile wide added to the limits, the municipality finds itself at the mercy of the company. Instead of accepting its terms it preferred to depend upon America, and hundreds of petroleum lamps have been put up in the new streets. From the other side of the Atlantic have came two gifts to bless and cheer European populations—the sewing-machine and mineral-oil—gifts universally accepted and gratefully acknowledged. In hundreds of houses and shops the machine is introduced, and day is prolonged for its use by the cheap medium for illumination. All over this city the shops are placarded with notices of articles from America for sale. One of the latest novelties advertised is Vino d' America.

NEW KINDS OF WINE.

The late Marquis RIDOLFI, while Minister of Agriculture under the Government of LEOPOLDO, did much for the improvement of many kinds of field and garden culture, and being himself one of the most extensive vine-growers of the country, his attention was directed to improvements in its cultivation. He introduced from the United States cuttings from some of the varieties indigenous to that country, and with such success that now, in parts of Tuscany, considerable quantities of wine are produced known as "wine of America." The color is a fine garnet, and the taste and smell are strongly marked with the flavor of the strawberry. This wine is much in favor, and its production is extending to meet the demand; and the good results of the first attempt will probably lead to new experiments with American vines, for one great advantage is that they are not attacked by the European vine malady.

EFFECT OF THE WAR NEWS.

The incident of the Hohenzollern nomination has come opportunely to relieve the dullness of the hot Midsummer solstice. The grain harvest is cut and gathered in, and in fancy is heard the armed heel of the soldier crashing the dry stubble of the peaceful fields. The Bourse is agitated, and the funds are falling; those of Italy, with no part in the quarrel, falling most of all. This, because French blood is boiling within an ambitious, and what might become this time, not sterile rage. France seems determined to pick a quarrel with her neighbor; for the cloud in the sky does not seem big enough to bring on in the order of nature such a tempest. The French are doubtless thinking quite as much of the Rhine, and how to get there, as they are of the offense of a German Prince on the Spanish throne. As for the Italians, their love for the French does not increase, and more animated expressions of hostility are heard every day. The Government—that is, the Ministry and the Crown—are on the side of France, but the hearts of the people have not French sympathies. There is a disturbing consciousness of certain advantages enjoyed by France, not yet in the possession of Italy, and impatience of the slow processes by which alone the envied standard can be reached. To be patronized makes a proud spirit chafe.

ANGELICO.

Emigration to the South.

The Meridian (Miss.) Gazette says: "This subject has received a good deal of consideration by our citizens since the war; many efforts have been made to fill up the waste places of our State by a class of industrious citizens, who would assist in developing the agricultural resources of the State; but, as yet, little has been accomplished, owing, perhaps, to some extent, to the plans and means to induce them to come. We are glad to learn, however, that Messrs. LIEB & GALLAGHER have perfected arrangements with the Vicksburg and Meridian Railroad Company, by which they have reason to believe the desired object will be accomplished. This places at the disposal of these gentlemen about 300,000 acres of land, belonging to the railroad, which they will dispose of to immigrants or actual settlers, on a credit of five years, and at a very low price; the arrangement enables all who desire to settle in the South to obtain a home. This scheme was first presented to the Company by Messrs. LIEB & GALLAGHER about two months ago, since which time it has been steadily gaining favor with the officers, when, at their meeting last Thursday, it received the indorsement of the Board of Directors. We are glad to learn that the Company exhibited a very liberal spirit in the matter, and will at once place all the necessary funds at the disposal of Messrs. LIEB & GALLAGHER, to enable them to carry out their plans. And arrangements have been caused with the Vicksburg and St. Louis Packet Company to transport immigrants from the latter place to Vicksburg. An office has been opened at Vicksburg, and Gen. LIEB is now in St. Louis, making arrangements to open one there. The principal offices will be at Meridian and Chicago. We wish the enterprise success."

A BLOODY FEUD.

The Latest Tennessee Tragedy—Murder of Col. Dickens—A Shocking Record of Crime.

From the Memphis Avalanche of Sunday.

Col. THOMAS DICKENS, well known to the people of Shelby County, and whose name is familiar to the readers of the Avalanche, was way-laid on yesterday morning by some fiend, and his life destroyed, in daylight, on a public road. The whole city was shocked and astounded by the news. The manner in which the terrible crime was done added to the horror that seized the public mind, and especially because the victim was Col. THOMAS DICKENS, whose feud with WADE H. BOLTON, and whose acquittal for the killing of WADE H. BOLTON is still fresh in the memory of our readers. Col. DICKENS had passed Friday night with his neighbor, JOHN C. BOLTON, who lives on Big Creek, about six miles north-east of Raleigh, in this county. Yesterday morning he mounted his horse and started for home, a distance of four miles, and while riding leisurely along, all alone, about 7 A. M., and not suspecting any evil or harm, he was suddenly fired on by an assassin concealed in the undergrowth near the public road. The fiend discharged the contents of a double-barreled shot-gun into the body of the old man, instantly killing him and mangling his body dreadfully. The work was deliberately done; both barrels were fired, one after another, with an interval of a few seconds. At the first fire the old man was shot off his horse, and after he fell to the ground the second fire was heard. The gun was loaded with buckshot, and as the assassin was within ten paces of Col. DICKENS, the effect of the balls was terrible, mangling and tearing the body to pieces. The horse turned back and was caught at BOLTON'S store by the young man in charge of it. The shooting had been heard plainly in the direction from which the horse came, and the blotches of blood on the saddle and rump of the horse at once spoke of the murder. But the terrible catalogue of crimes linked with the BOLTON and DICKENS families instantly appeared to the minds of the people at BOLTON'S store, and it was with difficulty that any one or more could be found brave enough to go to the scene of murder.

MOTIVE FOR THE CRIME.

"Who did the deed?" is the question asked by every one, and answered by no one. The deadly feud between WADE H. BOLTON and THOMAS DICKENS is involuntarily alluded to as furnishing an explanation. But how is it possible that this can be so, when WADE BOLTON is dead? Who represents WADE BOLTON? In May, 1867, ISAAC L. BOLTON killed a Kentuckian, named MCMILLAN. This occurred at the slave mart of BOLTON, D

SPAIN AND THE WAR.

Strong Feeling in Favor of the French—The Attitude of the Republicans—Movements of the Agitators.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MADRID, Wednesday, July 20, 1870.

At a time when Europe is held in suspense and is anxiously waiting for the dénouement of the great drama about to be played out on the banks of the Rhine, it is but natural that Spain should be keenly alive to what may be its probable results to herself. In official circles here, it is advisable to convoke the Cortes at once, so that the form of government of the country may be determined before victory may have granted, either to France or Prussia, the power of exercising any influence in favor of this or that candidate for the Crown. The Deputies devoted to Gen. PRIM, and also the General himself, do not consider it desirable to assemble the Cortes before the date already fixed upon, viz., the 31st of October next. In this way they would avoid the accusations and re-criminations that would be brought against them and the arousing still more [of passions, sufficiently excited at the present moment.

FEELINGS OF PARTIES.

I must not conceal from you the fact, that a party of the Spanish Deputies are desirous of seeing the French armies victorious, in the hope that France would assist them in placing the son of the Ex-Queen on the throne; but if ever that should happen the Republicans would take up arms and commence a struggle that would only terminate with the life of the last of their men. Another party, the one which supports PRIM, and which in return is petted by him, would like to see the Prussian arms victorious, for in that case Prince LEOPOLD, upon whom all their hopes now rest, would receive the Crown of Spain as a reward of perseverance granted to M. DE BISMARCK, and the reigning family of Prussia.

ATTITUDE OF THE REPUBLICANS.

In the midst of this discord produced by political passion, the Republicans protest with all their energy against what they call the conspiracies of the Monarchists, some of whom have a foot in the French, while others have one in the Prussian camp. Says the journal of M. CASTELAR:

"Unhappy Spain, your political position is deplorable. Your policy since the establishment of a constitutional Government has been but a miserable drama of tears, miseries and blood. The shock of violent passions agitates this poor country. The desire for the public good is dying out. In Spain the man who is patriotic and desirous of the public welfare is, so to speak, stifled. Patriotism is a chimera; truth and disinterestedness have a contrary meaning here. Loyalty, good faith and political honesty are but sarcasms. In Spain, among the generality of politicians, one only meets with pride, ambition, selfishness and apostacy. With all these patriots the country means the Budget, and that is why we are constantly witnessing useless insurrections and revolutions which only end in a change of persons, and why the misfortunes of Spain, instead of coming to an end, go on increasing."

THE SPANISH MONARCHISTS.

At the present time all the Spanish monarchists turn their regards to the north of Europe, in order to be able to appeal to the strongest party to assist them in placing their particular candidate on the throne to the detriment of all others and the Republic. The Carlists are in despair at learning that their idol, Don CARLOS, has been forced to leave France by order of the French Government. I am assured that he has returned to Vevay in Switzerland. You will see that the Legitimist organs are constantly speaking of their party being about to take up arms. There is no serious intention of this kind, you may rest assured. These reports are only intended to keep up a state of alarm and uneasiness. Conformably with the expressed wishes of the Cortes, the Republicans are asking for a general amnesty for prisoners condemned for political offenses, and I believe it will not be long before the Ministry sets the political detenus free, and opens the ports of Spain to all who have been exiled.

A Runaway Match and What Came of It—The Bride Bound and Locked Up.

The Columbus, (Ohio) Journal of a recent date says: On Saturday, at 9 o'clock A. M., Mr. SHEDRACK NEEL and Miss SARAH EVANS were married at the house of J. H. DEMING, Justice of the Peace in Franklin township. Miss EVANS is about twenty years of age, and NEEL stated when he secured the license, that he was over age. The license was issued by Judge PUGH, on NEEL making affidavit to this fact. Miss EVANS' parents were opposed to the match, and ordered the young lady not to speak with the young man. The young lady showed her contempt for this order by going off with NEEL on Sunday morning and becoming his wife. After the ceremony at Justice DEMING's, the newly-married pair went to the house of Mr. BRADFORD, NEL's step-father, at North Columbus, or near there. There they remained until Monday morning, when the two brothers of Miss EVANS made a raid on the Bradford establishment, carried their sister out of the house by main force, put her in the buggy, tied her hands and feet with the lines, and in spite of her cries and struggles and the resistance of the women of the house, carried her back in triumph to her father's home. There she was kept until yesterday, locked in a room. Yesterday Mr. NEEL made application for a writ of habeas corpus, claiming that his wife was forcibly detained by her parents. The writ was issued, served by the Sheriff, and yesterday evening the young lady was produced in Court. The marks were still on the woman's face where she had been tied, and there were other signs of rough treatment. She told her story a little nervously, and with a defiant air; said she went away from home boldly, and took nothing but what belonged to her. After hearing the testimony of the different witnesses, Judge PUGH sustained the writ, discharged Mrs. NEEL, and ruled that the defendants in the case, the EVANS, should pay costs of prosecution, as they were the first offenders in kidnapping another man's wife. Mr. NEEL, the husband, was not in Court. The constable held a warrant for his arrest on a charge of perjury, and he had been warned off. Mrs. NEEL was in charge of Mr. BRADFORD, and on the decision of the Judge went out of the room in his company. Mr. EVANS claims that NEEL is a trifling fellow, and that this action has been animated by the wish to secure the daughter's welfare.

A Murderer Arrested—He Confesses His Guilt.

From the Nashville (Tenn.) Union, July 30.

It will be remembered that some time during last Winter a murder was committed in Maury County in circumstances that excited considerable indignation and comment. The perpetrators of the deed, were published at the time. The name of the man killed was HENRY or HAL RAY, and the party who committed the act was a negro named DICK CUNNINGHAM. There was a reward offered at the time by interested parties of $800, and, we believe, an additional reward by the Governor. Since the transaction the negro, CUNNINGHAM, has been dodging about from place to place, eluding the officers and the vigilance of the law. Encouraged by the lapse of time that had intervened, and the hope that the deed had comparatively passed out of mind, he ventured to take a trip on the railroad. It was a fatal trip to him. Yesterday he was seen and recognized on the train coming this way at Franklin by Mr. LAWRENCE KHUN. Mr. KHUN boarded the train and came on to the city, also keeping a sharp eye on the darkey, whose suspicions, however, had evidently become aroused. On reaching the depot CUNNINGHAM got on a street car, followed by his lynx-eyed pursuer, and came on to town. Reaching the city without losing sight of his man, Mr. KHUN gave notice to Capt. EVERETT and Mr. CRUNK, of the Police force. CUNNINGHAM did not tarry long in the crowded parts of the thoroughfare, but went straight out to Park-street, where he was arrested and taken before Justice WILKINSON. The full measure of his offense was well known and his identification complete. He saw that his case was a desperate one, and confessed his guilt.

Shocking Case of Suicide—A Shoe-maker Blows His Brains Out.

From the Cincinnati Commercial, Aug. 2.

The usual quiet of Avondale was broken by a terrible suicide last evening. A shoe-maker named HENRY WITZLEBEN, aged forty-eight years, having finished his work, sought, as was his custom, a little frolic and fun at a neighboring drinking-saloon. He drank freely, and left the saloon in a drunken condition. In this state he wended his way to his home, muttering insane threats to those he met, but was not answered until he arrived at what he called his home—a place which his debauchery had made a den of misery. His ill-treated wife, who had prepared his supper for him, persuaded him to sit down and eat. As he ate, he began abusing her, using the foulest language, rewarding her kindness with his horrid curses, and her love with fiendish threats. Having finished his supper, he staggered to his shop followed by his wife, who entreated him to return home and go to bed. Her pleadings were of no avail, for, seizing an old musket which he had kept for the purpose of shooting birds, he put a load into it, and while doing so, in drunken accents, asked his wife which she would die first. Terrified at this speech and his actions, the poor wife ran from the shop. She had gone but a short distance when she heard the report of a gun. Instantly she retraced the report of the entered the shop, only to behold her steps and remains of her husband. She had placed the gun at the base of his right ear, and had used his great toe to move the trigger. The shot carried away the greater portion of his head, and therefore life was soon extinct. He leaves a wife and four children.

THE OIL REGIONS.

Latest Discoveries—A One Hundred and Fifty Barrel Well at Shamburg—The Allegheny Oil Fields.

The Titusville Herald says: "The Conaghy well, upon the McCray Farm, Petroleum Centre, has not decreased in production since striking, but, on the contrary, maintained nearly a steady production of between 300 and 400 barrels daily. The Dalzell & McCray District carries the palm for large and productive wells, and another well upon the McCray Farm is about tested, with indications fully as good as those of any previous strike in this locality. A new well upon the Chicago Tract, at Shamburg, which was recently torpedoed, was doing 140 barrels yesterday, and promises to be as productive as any previously struck upon this territory. The Sheriff Thomas Weil, at West Hickory, is doing about 130 barrels, instead of 350, as stated.

The Oil City Times of Monday, says that the well put down by OWSTON & SOWERS, on Shaffer Run, was tested on Friday last, and is now producing fifty barrels daily. This territory, or at least some portions of it, is now producing in paying quantities, and there are several more wells going down in that locality. Our townsman, Col. DUNCAN, has been exceedingly unfortunate with his well on this territory, the tools having been stuck in the hole for several months, all efforts, so far, to remove them having proved fruitless.

A well located on the Watson property, between the point and the toll-gate, Franklin, was struck on Wednesday last, and we understand was, on Friday last, pumping at the rate of ten barrels daily. In pumping off the head it produced five barrels per hour.

A gentleman of Erie is willing to bet that, inside of five years, oil will be found in the vicinity of Erie, as abundantly as upon Oil Creek. He argues, "where there's smoke there's fire, and where there's gas there's ile."

A new well on the Hoffman farm, West Hickory, struck Wednesday, is yielding forty barrels per day: owned by ARMSTRONG.

The East Brady Independent has the following in regard to Bunday oil-field: "The following statement will show the progress making in development in this district: Walker well No. 1, 1,100 feet; Walker well No. 2, 600 feet; Moody & Jennings, on Jennings farm, 750 feet; Dr. James well No. 1, Jennings farm, 750 feet; Dr. James well No. 2, Meldren farm, 400 feet; Jennings & Gordon, Meldren farm, 650 feet. The Armstrong well is under the management of Mr. L. P. WALKER. They are drawing tubing with the intention of drilling it through the third sand and torpedoing. This will, we trust, prove a thorough test. A great anxiety is felt in regard to this well, and everything is hoped for from the efforts now being made to test it. In a few weeks a number of wells will be completed, when we look for important strikes that will equal if not rival the Armstrong. The well, after the new engine had been "set up" and everything put in working order, began steadily to produce oil at the rate of from ten to fifteen barrels per day; but they soon became dissatisfied with that for a production and tore up arrangements, drove tubing, began drilling, and ordered ten barrels of benzine—which is now lying at the well—and began rapidly preparing for a torpedo. They seem to be right, and we hope they are. We favor the plan, for it will open the crevices which must be certainly clogged, or rather jammed full of mud, judging from the amount of torpedoing that has been done. We visited PARKER'S on Wednesday last, and found matters somewhat dull owing to the downward tendency in the price of oil. But few new strikes have been recently made, and operators are waiting for an improvement in the market. The amount of oil in tanks is 40,000 barrels. Oil is quoted at $3 to $3 25, and few sales.

The FOX farm wells are producing a good deal of oil.

The Kribbs well, on the Kelly farm, was torpedoed last week, and for two hours after pumped at the rate of seventy-five barrels per day. When put in working order it will be a twenty-five barrel well.

Two wells are about to be put down at Rimerton; one in the village and the other on the opposite side of the river. Work is to be commenced immediately.

The Redbank well, a short distance below the mouth, is now down 1,400 feet, with a good show of oil. It is to be tubed and tested this week.

The Clarion Democrat says: No oil has been found at Blyson or Deer Creek, or anywhere along the upper Clarion, though wells are not all tested. The new well at Blyson pumps salt water in fair quantities, and they (the Company) have commenced the manufacture of salt. The Alum Rock well is being drilled deeper. A number of good wells have recently been tested in Perry Township and up along the Clarion River, Grant's Administration—Senator Harlan's Opinion of the General.

The following letter was written to a gentleman in Florida in reply to a communication addressed to Senator HARLAN, of Iowa, asking for information about the Administration of Gen. GRANT:

UNITED STATES SENATE CHAMBER, WASHINGTON, July 30, 1870.

My Dear Colonel:

In reply to yours of the 16th, I have to say that the criticisms of President GRANT and his Administration found in Southern papers, and supported by certain Republican papers, so called, in the North, are without sufficient foundation. President GRANT's habits, as far as I am able to learn, and as I firmly believe, are exemplary in every respect. He is a gentleman in his bearing, officially and socially, always manifesting great intelligence, both in conversation and in the discharge of his official duties. He has not always appointed great men to civil stations, but very few can be named who are destitute of respectable talents, and as a rule they are honest and faithful. And in this connection allow me to say that our Government is so simple in its form and machinery that great talents are not absolutely necessary to secure success in its administration. Hence, honesty and industry, supported by medium talents in public station, ought to be satisfactory to the people. I therefore think it would be wise, taking all into consideration, to continue this Administration another term, and I predict the people will so decide. That President GRANT has made some mistakes, I freely admit; but as they were mistakes, and not intentional errors, the presumption is that they will, as far as practicable, be avoided in the future. And it is by no means certain that any of our greatest and most experienced statesmen would not, if in his situation, have committed errors equally grave. That the Government is, on the whole, being carefully and prudently administered and the laws faithfully enforced, without bluster, flurry, "fear, favor, or affection," no one can truthfully deny. The honest and faithful collection of the revenue has enabled the Government to reduce the public debt at a rate below ten millions of dollars per month, on an average, since the date of President GRANT's inauguration, and warranted Congress to greatly reduce the rate of taxation. This ought to be satisfactory. But there are those who desire to break down the administration for the purpose of advancing their own interests; and I regret to add that some of them are shining lights in the Republican Party. As to changes and proposed changes in office, to which you refer, I need only say that so far as they have occurred, I am of the opinion the service has been improved. There are, of course, some exceptions. I would say, with my limited information, have recalled Mr. MOTLEY; but no one can find fault with Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN as his successor. The latter is not, probably, the equal of the former in the field of battle; but Mr. MOTLEY is hardly the equal of the latter in jurisprudence and statesmanship. Personally, I am satisfied with President GRANT's Administration. Taking it all in all, I doubt if any one of our leading statesmen of greater pretensions would improve it. I have felt such a sense of safety and security for all our free institutions since he came to the Presidential office, such a freedom from solicitude and anxiety, which pursued me day and night, for two years preceding, like an [omen of evil, that I feel like protesting against a change, unless for the gravest reasons. It is true, as you state, that some influential public journals of Republican politics have assailed President GRANT; but they have assailed Congress with equal recklessness; and in each case, as I think, without sufficient reasons. The conductors of papers are, like the rest of us, only human. They have their likes and dislikes, and are not always wise enough to suppress the spirit of fault-finding, especially when disappointed in their personal aspirations. I believe I have now traversed all your inquiries, answering them frankly as you requested. With great respect yours truly, JAMES HARLAN.

Col. THOS. J. SAUNDERS, Tallahassee, Fla.

The Evanston, Ill., Outrage—Sympathy With the Sufferers.

The Chicago Post of Aug. 2, says:

"A meeting of the citizens of Evanston was held, last evening, to express the indignation of the inhabitants at the outrage recently perpetrated on Mrs. WOODRICK and her daughter. Judge SAMUEL DOUGLAS was elected Chairman.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the outrage recently perpetrated in this village, in which two poor and unprotected women were cruelly and shamefully assaulted by a crowd of lawless men, was an act of cowardly brutality, deserving the instant and unmeasured reprobation of all who would shield the humblest home and the lowliest woman from ruffianly violence.

Whereas, By the recent outrage in our village, two helpless women have been reduced to a condition which claims the sympathy and material assistance of the public; therefore,

Resolved, That Mrs. A. H. HOGE, Mrs. M. G. CLARK, Mrs. E. HASKINS and Mrs. JULIUS WHITE be a committee to ascertain what their necessities are, receive contributions to meet them, and to disburse the same according to their best judgment.

Subscriptions amounting to $380 were taken up, after which the meeting adjourned."

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

No transactions were effected at the Exchange, yesterday, and hardly any one was in attendance. Thus far this week but one sale has been made, and there is little chance now for any activity in the market. The fact cannot be denied that real estate matters are "flat," for in public the only sales which are made are those ordered by decree of Court, while in private the transactions are few. A glance at the transfers recorded each day show each week a decrease in business, and in all branches of the trade dullness is the chief characteristic. Suburban sales up to this time have been the only exception, but of these few are at present advertised. There is now but little hope felt, by those experienced, that any better state of affairs will prevail until Fall, when a general revival of business and the return of residents to the City will cause a demand for various classes of property, resulting, it is hoped, in an active market.

The auction of JOHNSON & MILLER, yesterday, of lots at Carlstadt, N. J., was well attended, eight cars of the special train being filled with parties from this City, principally Germans, who were interested in the sale, and availed themselves of this means of conveyance for being present. After some eighty lots had been disposed of the storm set in, greatly to the disappointment of all concerned, and a postponement was rendered necessary. The day fixed for the next sale is the 18th instant, when the remaining lots will be struck off. Such as were sold brought good prices, full particulars in regard to which will be found below. Each lot is 25x100.

523 OF THE MOST DESIRABLE LOTS ever offered, will be sold at auction, to the highest bidders, regardless of price.

THE VAN NUISE FARM,

situated almost in the centre of the City, on the highest ground in the city, with excellent surroundings; streets all graded, and every lot ready for immediate use, must prove a profitable investment to purchasers at the coming sale. Livingston-av., bounding the farm on the south, and Remsen-av., running near its northerly line, are each fine wide thoroughfares. A volume could easily be written of the advantages of New-Brunswick, as a place of residence; situated on the Raritan River, in the finest agricultural portion of the State, the cost of living is fully twenty per cent. less than in New-York, or any of its adjacent cities, while its communication with the Metropolis is constant by twenty-eight daily trains. No place in Westchester County can be so readily reached, and at so low rates of commutation, viz: $85 per annum. New-Brunswick contains a population of 20,000. It has water and gas. Rutgers College, at which hundreds of our most popular divines, literary, and public men, received their scholastic education, is within sight of the property to be sold, as are also, twenty churches, scores of Grammar and free schools, etc., etc.

The coming sale will afford the best opportunity ever offered to secure lots and plots at reasonable prices in the most select portion of the city.

Half the purchase money may remain on mortgage. Title unquestionable.

Should the weather prove stormy the sale will take place the next fair day.

900 BUILDING LOTS AND PLOTS

IN THE CITY OF SCRANTON, PENN.,

On TUESDAY, Aug. 16, at 10 o'clock, on the premises, at Scranton, by LAWRENCE, OAKLEY & FLEURY.

Nine hundred beautifully-located building lots, of 23 to 26 feet 8 inches front by 150 to 160 feet in depth, on avenues 80 feet in width, each lot having a back outlet on street 20 feet wide.

These lots form the most beautiful portion of the city plot, gradually rising in slope several hundred feet, giving superb views from each of the blocks of many miles in extent.

For salubrity, beauty of its buildings, width of its avenues, together with its business and social advantages, Scranton offers rare inducements. From a population of about ten thousand twelve years ago, it now numbers upward of sixty thousand persons.

A mountain stream of large volume passes the property at an elevation sufficient to supply abundantly all the city with the purest water for domestic or steam purposes.

The particular attention of manufacturers and others is invited to this rare opportunity for profitable investment. Coal can be had for about fifty cents per ton, and raw material and provisions at the lowest figures. Four or five trunk railroads centre here, being only four or five hours from New-York.

Terms of sale half cash, balance on liberal time, if desired, at six per cent. interest. Nuisances interdicted.

THE LONG BRANCH RACES.

Fourth Day of the Sport—Large Attendance and Capital Racing—Enquirer Wins the Robins Stake, McKinney the Two-Year-Old Purse, R. E. Connolly the Selling Race, and Rapture the Gentleman's Purse.

Yesterday was the fourth day of the Long Branch Race Meeting, and, for the first time since it was inaugurated, the weather was unfavorable. The gathering clouds in the sky throughout the morning portended a storm, but this did not prevent some 3,000 votaries of racing of both sexes from patronizing the course. The programme of sport on the card was highly attractive, comprising four races, among them a two-mile-heat race, so popular among the general public. The management of the course was, as heretofore, irreproachable, and Mr. RAYNER, the energetic Secretary, deserves honor for the ability with which his arduous duties have been performed. The arrangement of the restaurant in connection with the grand stand deserves mention, for it differs altogether from the system of management adopted on other race-courses. Here the entire business of the department, including wines and other liquid refreshments, is in the hands of the Association, under the capable superintendence of Mr. CHARLES CHAMBERLIN, and everything supplied is of the very best quality, and at Broadway prices. By this method reasonable charges and refreshments of the highest quality are secured to the public who patronize the department.

The first race yesterday for the Robbins Stakes, two-mile heats, brought together three of the best three-year olds on the turf. These were: Kingfisher, the colt that Mr. BELMONT, who is confessedly one of the most liberal patrons of the American turf that we possess, did not hesitate to give $15,000 for after he had won the Travers Stakes at Saratoga, subsequent to his winning the Belmont Stakes at Jerome Park; Enquirer, the promising son of Leamington and Lida that Gen. BUFORD bred and still owns, but is always willing to dispose of for $20,000; and Mr. F. M. HALL'S ch. c. Major, who won the Mansion House Stakes at this meeting. Kingfisher on the strength of his two clever victories at Jerome Park and Saratoga was made the favorite at the odds of $100 to $70, but before the race was run, and it was finally ascertained that Enquirer was going to run, there was a strong desire to back him, especially among the Western turfmen, who had seen him run two mile heats at Lexington this Spring and beat another great son of Leamington, JOHN HARPER'S Littleton; making the first heat in 3:36¾, and the first mile of the second heat in 1:43½. So anxious were they to back the Kentucky colt, that he speedily became a greater favorite than Kingfisher, whose main body of adherents were New-Yorkers. The track was tremendously heavy, which somewhat shook the confidence of Enquirer's partisans; his trainer, the veteran TOM PATTERSON, having openly declared in the morning, that if the course kept dry and good, his horse would run the two miles in 3:34, or less. Still, they relied upon the unflinching game their colt possessed, and the result justified their confidence. He made the running for the first mile and a half, with Major contending with him for the lead, and Kingfisher in waiting. When the latter made his run, he had Major safe in a few strides, and, overtaking Enquirer, beat him home by a length and a half. But good judges observed that Enquirer showed little evidence of fatigue after the heat, while MR. BELMONT'S colt looked tired. Still the latter was backed to win at $100 to $40; many of the original backers of Enquirer hedging their money, and plunging on Kingfisher. The second heat put a different phase on the contest, for Enquirer led throughout, and, despite the whip and spur and all the skill of HENNESSY, Kingfisher could not even gain second place, as Major finished lengths before him. So badly had Kingfisher tired in the second heat that the odds of $1,000 to $150 bet on Enquirer were justified by the appearance of the two horses, and a good deal of money was bet at even that Major beat him in the third heat. But MR. BELMONT'S colt, although doomed to be defeated, was far from disgraced, and he ran like the great race-horse that he unquestionably is, cutting down Major with ease, and finishing within a length of Enquirer after running in the finest manner throughout the heat. Whether he would have done better on a good track is only a matter of conjecture, but we have reason for stating that Kingfisher was not quite up to the mark, and that it will be folly to underrate his merits from this his first and only defeat.

The two-year-old race is not worthy of comment, for it afforded no test of the merits of the colts. Thanks to a wretched start, McKinney got away lengths before the others, and won easily. This was the worst start that we have witnessed through the meeting. The selling-race was won by Richard B. Connolly, who, in the hands of his English trainer, seems to have commenced a brilliant and successful racing career. He got off far behind the others, but his fine speed brought him to the front, and he won cleverly. The splendid cup, a silver punch-bowl, of elegant design and massive structure, for gentlemen riders, was won by Rapture and Mr. BERESFORD, beating St. Patrick, who was badly ridden by Lord WODEHOUSE, an English amateur rider.

To-morrow the great four-mile-heat race comes off, and this popular and now rare description of race will be certain to attract a vast attendance. There are fifteen entries, but probably not more than four or five will run. Two other interesting races are also on the card.

In connection with the subscription raised among the turfmen at Monmouth Park, last Saturday, to compensate Major T. G. BACON for the loss of his valuable horse Lynchburg, who broke his shoulder-blade running the second heat, after winning the first, we gladly give place to the following letter, of thanks and acknowledgment:

MONMOUTH PARK, Thursday, Aug. 4, 1870.

To E. W. Cameron and others:

Permit me, gentlemen, through the columns of the Press, to return you my kindest thanks for your generosity so bountifully bestowed upon me by my brother turfites at this place. At all times, and under any circumstances, such an act of kindness would have been duly appreciated. But coming, as it does, at a time when, for the last three years, misfortune had deprived me of the use of the services of some valuable horses, and when for the last two months sickness had prostrated me, you cannot imagine the high esteem I place on your generous act.

Permit me again, gentlemen, to thank you kindly.

Very respectfully yours, &c.,
THOMAS G. BACON.

THE ROBINS STAKES.

The first race was for three-year olds, carrying 100 pounds, $50 subscription, play or pay, with $3,000 added, of which the first horse took $2,000, the second $700, and the third $300. The distance was two-mile heats, and there were twenty-five entries, so that the stake was worth $3,200, net, to the winner. Three only came to the post, for the prestige of Kingfisher and Enquirer frightened away all except Major, who had won the Mansion House Stakes, two miles, so cleverly, two days before, that his owner thought he might have a chance against the two cracks in this race. Enquirer had won the opening race at this meeting, the Continental Hotel Stakes, and as he had run and won at two-mile heats at Lexington, this Spring, in extraordinary fast time, the first heat being run in 3:35¾, his party knew he could go the distance, and when it was finally decided to start him for this race the Western turfmen backed him in such earnest that he deposed Kingfisher from the premiership in the betting which he had previously enjoyed, and took his place. In the first pool Kingfisher sold for $600, Enquirer $350, and Major $150. In the second Kingfisher brought $600, Enquirer $510, and Major $160. The next pool saw Enquirer, although second choice, sell over Kingfisher, the latter bringing $850, Enquirer $910, and Major $160; and they sold in this proportion up to the start.

FIRST HEAT.—Enquirer was first away when the drum was tapped, with Kingfisher second and Major last. Before the quarter-pole was reached Major passed Kingfisher, and was at Enquirer's saddle-girths at that point. They ran thus along the backstretch, past the half-mile pole, and along the lower stretch to the three-quarter pole, where Enquirer was still leading Major half a length, and Kingfisher, under waiting orders, two lengths behind. They ran thus under the string on the first mile, but on the next quarter Major got on even terms with Enquirer, and ran head and head with him to the half-mile pole. On the lower end Kingfisher ran up and passed Major, who had fallen back a little, and challenging Enquirer, deprived him of the lead, amid great excitement and the loud cheering of his backers. As the horses swung into the homestretch Kingfisher was leading Enquirer two lengths, and although the latter reduced the gap a little, when JOE applied the spur he could not reach MR. BELMONT'S colt, who won cleverly by a length and a half; two lengths separating Enquirer from Major, who was third. Time—3:56¾. The jockeys could not be recognized for the deep coating of mud with which their faces and jackets were covered.

SECOND HEAT.—Kingfisher now was a great favorite, selling for $320, Enquirer $110 and Major $30. Enquirer, with Major at his quarters, made the running throughout the first mile, with Kingfisher at Major's girths as they went under the string. At the turn Kingfisher fell into third place, and Enquirer, without ever being headed, came home an easy winner of the heat by three lengths, Major beating Kingfisher four lengths for second place. Kingfisher, although on the last half mile he got to within a length of Enquirer, could never fairly reach him, and tiring, was badly beaten. Time—3:54½.

THIRD HEAT.—Betting $1,000 to $150 on Enquirer, who made the running from the tap of the drum, and passed under the string on the first mile a length ahead of Major, who was as far before Kingfisher at the turn; the latter deprived Major of second position, but he could never overtake Enquirer, who won the heat and race in a canter by a clear length, Kingfisher twenty lengths before Major. Time—4:00.

FIRST RACE—ROBINS' STAKES.—For three-year olds, to carry 100 pounds. Subscription $50, play or pay. Heats of two miles. Purse $3,000; first horse $2,000, second horse $700, third horse $300.

THE TWO-YEAR-OLD RACE.

The second race, for a purse of $700, three-quarters of a mile, had four entries—W. BABCOCK'S ch. f. Nellie Ransom, H. P. MCGRATH'S ch. c. McKinney, A. K. RICHARDS' ch. f. by Lexington, dam Sally Lewis, and L. W. JEROME'S ch. f. by Kentucky, dam Gilda. RICHARDS' filly had the call over the others, selling for $600; Rattan, $550, JEROME filly, Nellie Ransom $100; McKinney $80. It was a wretched start, for McKinney got away several lengths in front when the flag fell, was never caught, and won easily by four lengths. Time—1:23.

SECOND RACE.—Purse $700, for two-year olds. Three-quarters of a mile. The winner of West End Hotel Stakes to carry 5 pounds extra.

THE SELLING RACE.

The third race for a purse of $600, all ages, one mile and a quarter, had three runners—Richard B. Connolly, Domeraile colt and Norton colt. The latter was the favorite, selling for $560; Connolly $250, and Domeraile $330. Domeraile colt got the lead, Connolly being several lengths behind at the start, but gradually overhauling the two leaders, he challenged the Norton colt half way up the stretch, and after a rattling finish beat him to the string by three-quarters of a length. Time—2:30¼.

THIRD RACE—SELLING RACE.—For all ages. Purse $600. One and a quarter miles. The winner to be sold for $1,000; if entered to be sold for $750, allowed 5 pounds; for $500, 10 pounds. Any surplus over stated selling price to go to second horse.

THE GENTLEMAN'S CUP.

The fourth race, for all ages, gentlemen riders, the prize an elegant silver punchbowl, one mile, was contested by MR. LAWRENCE'S b. f. Rapture, ridden by Mr. BERESFORD, and Gov. BOWIE'S gr. h. St. Patrick, ridden by Lord WODEHOUSE. The betting was $100 to $50 on Rapture, who got off several lengths behind, but overhauling St. Patrick before they had gone a quarter of a mile, she beat him home with the greatest ease by six lengths in 1:59.

FOURTH RACE.—Gentleman's Cup. For all ages. Welter weights. Gentlemen riders. The prize—an elegant silver punch-bowl. One mile.

The German Young Men's Christian Association's Farewell to a Valued Member.

A farewell complimentary entertainment was given at the hall of the German Young Men's Christian Association, last evening, by his friends in the Association, to Mr. FREDERICK WILLIAM BLECHSCHMIDT, one of the most prominent, active and efficient members, who has endeared himself to his associates not only by his disinterested and sincere devotion to the cause of reform among the German young men of the City, but also by his kind and genial nature. Ample accommodation was provided, by a table extending the entire length of the hall, for the numerous guests. Rev. Dr. MCJILTON sat at the head of the table, Mr. BLECHSCHMIDT on his right, the President at his left, and Mr. ATKINSON at the opposite end. Prayer was offered up by Rev. Dr. MCJILTON, after which full justice was done to the delicacies bountifully provided. Speeches were delivered during the evening relating to the distinguished services of the honored guest of the evening, and expressing the deepest sorrow at his departure.

Among the speakers were Rev. Dr. MCJILTON and Mr. ATKINSON, who made addresses of considerable length, expressing their appreciation of the character and services of Mr. BLECHSCHMIDT, and wishing the God-speed on his visit to the fatherland. Remarks were also made by Messrs. REHR, PFARRER, and others. A set of resolutions, neatly engrossed, were presented to the guest of the evening by Mr. ATKINSON, expressive of the regret of the Association at parting with their friend, and of their appreciation of his past services. The exercises of the evening closed with singing by the choir of the Association.

Roughs in Catherine-Street—Passengers Stopped on Their Way to the Ferry.

A night or two since, about 10 o'clock in the evening, Mr. A. B. MILLER, who resides in Brooklyn, while passing down Catherine-street, on his way to the ferry, was assaulted and threatened with violence. Two men rushed out from a dark passage and one of them aimed a blow at the side of the gentleman's head, but fortunately it was warded off. He then, to preserve himself from further violence, struck at one of his assailants, when he saw a man rushing toward him with a glittering instrument in his hand, and not being armed, sought protection in a lager-beer saloon in the Catherine-street, where he met with a rough reception, for no sooner did he ask for assistance than three men inside set upon him, and he was thrust out by the saloon-keeper, and encountered those who had first assaulted him. His only chance was then to rush for the ferry, and this he did, running at the top of his speed, and seeking protection of the ferry-men. No officer was on hand, nor are there any ever to be found at this time, and the ruffians take advantage of their absence to assault every one who comes in their way, and abstract any valuables they can lay hold of. There have been similar cases almost every evening this and past weeks.

Mr. Ashbury at the Yacht Race.

The following courteous letter from the Secretary of the New-York Yacht Club to Mr. ASHBURY needs no explanation:

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF THE NEW-YORK YACHT CLUB,
NO. 41 WALL-ST., NEW-YORK, Aug. 3, 1870.

James Ashbury:

DEAR SIR: I am instructed by the judges of the contest for the America Cup to express to you their desire that you select any position in the line formed for the start that you may feel disposed to take.

The Club steamer will be on the ground and aid you in assuming such position on the morning of the race. Yours, &c.,

Fire in the Swamps of Jersey—Heavy Losses.

During the present week extensive fires have been raging in the pine forests and swamps in Ocean County, N. J., near Toms River. According to the report of a correspondent well acquainted with the region of which portions were swept by the conflagration, the fire has occasioned severe losses to a large number of land-owners, and has been the most disastrous that has occurred in the county for many years. The flames first broke out on Sunday last, in a swamp near Quail Run. A large tract of land, 3,000 acres in extent, owned by Mr. A. P. STANTON, was the first to be overrun by the flames. It was covered with a young growth of pine timber, which was entirely destroyed. Mr. STANTON'S loss is estimated at $60,000, while the losses sustained by owners of adjoining tracts has also been heavy. At one time a sheet of fire three miles long lit up the heavens.

A Dangerous Guest.

JAMES SMITH, a laboring man, residing in Hudson City, was in Paterson on Wednesday night looking for work, and being destitute of a place in which to sleep he was taken in out of pity by a Mr. ROBINSON, in Morton-street. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. ROBINSON treated their guest to beer, and about midnight he became noisy and uncontrollable. Seizing a knife he stabbed Mrs. ROBINSON, inflicting a deep wound in the arm near the shoulder. He also threatened the lives of the other inmates of the room, but was fortunately arrested before any more harm was done. He was yesterday committed to the County Jail for trial.

The Weather.

The following were the indications of the thermometer in the shade, yesterday, at the hours mentioned, at WILLIAM P. BYRNE'S mineral water "spa," No. 169 Broadway:

Fire in an Oil Refinery in Jersey City.

A fire broke out at about 4 o'clock, yesterday afternoon, in SOMMER'S Oil Refinery in Warren-street, Jersey City, which resulted in a loss of about $6,000 to the proprietors. It originated in the ignition by some unknown means of a small quantity of oil that had leaked from one of the vats. The building, which was of wood, and of little value, was destroyed. One hundred barrels of gasoline and oil were stored in the building. Forty barrels were saved by some extraordinary good fortune, the remainder being burned. The flames continued until about 7 o'clock, and at one time seriously threatened the adjoining sheds and oil-tanks. The property was fully insured.

A LAST APPEAL.

John Real to the Public—He Considers Himself a Sacrifice, and Upbraids Gov. Hoffman and Tammany.

To the Public:

Gov. HOFFMAN has refused to reprieve me. I must die an ignominious death. I know this. I feel it; but my poor suffering sisters and my faithful father feel it far more than I. It is on this account as well as on my own that I feel it my duty to give the public the following facts.

I killed SMEDICK, but I did not murder him. He had repeatedly beaten me, and had repeatedly threatened my life. I killed him in self-defense. I shot him after he had struck me twice, and was following up his attack. I am able to prove this by the testimony of unimpeachable witnesses, but the opportunity has been denied me. Gov. HOFFMAN would not listen to these witnesses, but I am sure that the people will. Gov. HOFFMAN would not go behind the record of the trial, but I firmly believe that the public will. A few words regarding the trial.

I was tried, convicted, and sentenced within twelve hours. The public were excited over the Rogers murder, and I was offered as the sacrifice. Now, when the question of my reprieve comes up, the public are again excited over the Nathan murder, and I am again to be offered as a public sacrifice. These are harsh words, but the facts will bear them out. My counsel vainly asked for time to produce witnesses. Their testimony would have convinced the jury of my innocence of the crime of murder. They would have been in the Court-room if they had known the trial would have been finished on that day. But the Judge was inexorable. He refused to delay the trial. The record was made up without the testimony of the eye-witnesses who could have cleared me of murder, and I was doomed to death. Who were the witnesses against me? They were Officers LAMBRECHT and MEE, and men named CARPENTER and HYLAND. LAMBRECHT is now accused of perjury before Justice COULTER; HYLAND has been held to bail for drawing a revolver on a citizen, and CARPENTER has been found guilty of robbery and sent to the Penitentiary. I appeal to the sober sense of the people. Should a man be sent to his grave on the testimony of such men as these? Officer MEE was allowed to give only just testimony enough to weigh heavily against me. He gave words as spoken by me in excitement caused by my arrest. He was not allowed to give further conversation with me, which would have destroyed the effect of those words. In his sworn affidavit before Commissioner WHITE he says, "He had another conversation with REAL next morning, in which REAL stated the reason why he shot SMEDICK was that he met him on the street and commenced to abuse him as he had often done before, and that he could not stand his clubbing any longer. He said he was on his way to his vessel which he was watching when SMEDICK assaulted him." JOHN MAHONY, an honest teamster, in a similar affidavit says, "I saw an officer strike a man twice in the head with a club, and then saw the man turn and give two shots, and then saw the officer fall." PHILIP COMISKY, a glass-blower, without a stain on his reputation, in affidavit that he "saw the officer in the act of using his club against REAL, and saw him strike him or at him one or more times, and immediately after deponent heard two pistol shots." All this is evidence that Gov. HOFFMAN refused to consider, preferring the testimony of men who have since been sent to the Penitentiary or brought before the Courts for perjury and other crimes. Could the Governor have reflected that he was bringing shame and sorrow upon the gray head of my fond father, and rending the hearts of my four affectionate sisters with anguish, when he resolutely shut his eyes to this testimony and resolved to go by the record of Judge BARNARD'S Court? But the Governor does not even heed the record of the Court. The jury, after duly weighing the evidence, unanimously recommended me to mercy. And this is not all. Three of the jurymen have made affidavit before the Governor that "We would not have assented to such a verdict except that we were assured that a recommendation to mercy would be sure to effect a commutation of the penalty to imprisonment for life in State Prison. That recommendation was based upon the ground, with the understanding and belief by all the jurors, so far as we know, that the prisoner would not be hanged, but would finally be sent to State Prison." With these facts ever burning upon my mind, I have not been without hopes of a commutation of my sentence. It has seemed impossible to me that such evidence should not have had its effect upon the mind of the Governor. What man in my position could have thought otherwise. The Governor offers the Nathan murder, and Judge BARNARD held up the Rogers murder, as an excuse for my death. But what had I to do with those murders? I did not murder either Mr. NATHAN or Mr. ROGERS. I should have had justice, without any reference to those murders. Should I, an innocent man, be sent to the gallows because the Police failed to discover the men who did those bloody deeds? But these are but mere excuses. I am sent to my grave for far different reasons. All my political friends in the Twenty-first Ward were opposed to Mr. HOFFMAN'S nomination for Governor. They gave all their support to the Hon. HENRY C. MURPHY, of Brooklyn, who was a rival candidate. So long as my friends sustained Mr. HOFFMAN and the other Tammany nominees, so long I was unmolested. My case was never called to trial until my friends supported Mr. MURPHY as a candidate for Governor, months and months after I was arrested. These facts are not only known to Gov. HOFFMAN, but to nearly every politician in the City. The Tammany politicians took advantage of the excitement caused by the Rogers murder to punish my friends for their refusal to support HOFFMAN by bringing me to trial. OAKEY HALL sat upon the bench with Judge BARNARD, and the trial was rushed through without allowing me time to defend myself. Had my friends continued to uphold Tammany, I might have now been at liberty. Men are now at large through the influence of Tammany who have committed, unlike me, unprovoked murders. Take the case of DONOHUE. He is charged with the murder of FLORENCE SCANNELL. He is now out on bail. Why? Is it not because he is a member of the Tammany Hall General Committee, and because he has been made a member of the Americus Club since the murder? I feel confident that I, like him, would have escaped if my friends had followed Tammany's leadership. Before the trial one of my friends met PETER B. SWEENY in the Park. SWEENY said "REAL must be hanged. He has got to be hanged. The interests of Tammany Hall demand it." Was it for the interests of Tammany Hall that Gov. HOFFMAN refused to commute my sentence? Was it for this that he refused to grant a respite when implored by some good priests who asked for a few days in which to prepare my soul for eternity? But the will of God be done. I feel that the Governor has acted willfully, but from the bottom of my soul I forgive him, and I pray that God may forgive him too, for I feel in my last moments that he needs the forgiveness of God. I die warmly thanking my friends for all they have done for me, and they have done much. To the Sheriff and the Warden, and all the keepers, I am indebted for the kindest sympathy and attention. God, I am sure, will reward the faithful priests and the good Sisters of Mercy who have been unremitting in their kindness to me. I die guiltless of the stain of murder. Of this I am conscious. And I die in the hope that this fact will soften the bitterness, the pain and the anguish of my poor father, sisters and relatives while weeping over my grave.

Another Attempted Wife Murder.

ADOLPH LUBIN, a Frenchman residing in Hoboken-avenue, in the Third Ward of Jersey City, was arrested last night, charged with an atrocious assault upon his wife. It appears that he attacked her in his house with a large jack-knife, with which he attempted to stab her. In her struggles she was thrown to the floor, when her inhuman husband threw himself upon her and holding her down, again attempted to use his knife. Her cries of "murder" attracted the attention of the officer who was patrolling his beat near the house, and hastening to the rescue he saved her life from the infuriated assailant.

Effects of the Thunder-Storm—Railroad Tracks and Telegraph Lines Dislocated.

A thunder-storm of considerable violence prevailed in this vicinity in the latter part of the afternoon yesterday. The Hudson River Railroad track at Spuyten Duyvil was so washed away as to throw a Yonkers train from the track. No one was injured, but all the trains were delayed. The break has been repaired and the trains are running regularly again.

At Morrisania the residence and printing office of Mr. JAMES STILLMAN, editor of the Westchester County Journal, were struck by lightning. The electric fluid struck the chimney of the house corner of Washington-avenue and Fifth-street, descended to the basement, and there struck Mrs. JAMES ARMSTRONG, a daughter of Mr. STILLMAN, and paralyzed her right arm. At about the same moment, a flash entered the printing office of Mr. STILLMAN, adjacent to his dwelling, knocked down WILLIAM DUANE, a compositor, injuring him about the head and paralysing his left arm and leg, demolished two type cases and scattered the type about in all directions, then passed out through a brick wall, leaving a hole large enough to see daylight through.

In Jersey City rain poured in torrents, and there came a gust of wind which twisted many beautiful trees from their stumps, and left whole avenues and streets with many trees utterly ruined, and others disfigured by the loss of large branches. At Bergen, the telegraph wire was blown down over the Communipaw-avenue bridge, and carriages and horse-cars were detained till it could be repaired.

The storm in Paterson was very severe. Several buildings were slightly damaged by lightning, and a man named NEWMAN was so affected by a shock that serious consequences are anticipated.

ANOTHER MURDER.

Fatal Result of a Drunken Quarrel—A Game of Cards the Cause of a Homicide.

On Wednesday night HENRY F. JOHNSON, a bar-keeper employed in the liquor-store at No. 100 James-street, MICHAEL GRIFFIN, PATRICK MCDONALD, and one or two other men of like character, employed their leisure time by playing cards for money in a back room of a dram-shop in James-slip. During the progress of a game JOHNSON and GRIFFIN quarreled to such a degree that they and the entire party adjourned to the street for a fight. The battle lasted only a few minutes, and the encounter was renewed as they came up New-Chambers and Cherry streets, where JOHNSON was stabbed under the right shoulder and on the right temple. He was also knocked down and sustained a compound fracture of the skull.

The wounded man was subsequently found in a semi-conscious condition by the Fourth Ward Police, who removed him to the Park Hospital in Centre-street. The patient lingered there until last evening, when death ensued.

The Police are now on the lookout for GRIFFIN and his companions, and hope soon to arrest them all. Coroner FLYNN has been notified, and will hold the necessary inquest as soon as practicable. The alleged murderer is a well-known denizen of the Fourth Ward, as was also his unfortunate victim.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

Mr. CHARLES LATOUR, the editor of a temperance paper called the Progress, while crossing the City Hall Park, yesterday afternoon, just as the storm came on, was knocked down by a team of horses attached to a heavy truck, which were coming along at a furious rate. Mr. LATOUR was conveyed to the Coroner's office in an insensible state, having just consciousness enough to refuse a glass of brandy which was offered as a restorative. On examination it was found that his head was slightly contused, and there were also bruises of the shoulder and right arm.

Rev. JAMES KENNEDY, of Newtownlimavady, Ireland, has accepted a call to settle as pastor of the Fourth Reformed Presbyterian Congregation of this City.

A large tree in Elm Park was struck by lightning yesterday afternoon during the storm, causing considerable consternation among a picnic party there.

MARY MURPHY, of No. 33 Oak-street, was severely beaten last evening by her husband STEPHEN, a sailor, just returned from sea. She was sent to the Park Hospital and the husband arrested by Capt. ALLAIRE.

BROOKLYN.

There are now 2,251 men employed in the Brooklyn Navy-yard, 500 of whom have been taken on this week. This additional force is employed principally in the construction department. A large number of men are employed upon four sloops-of-war that are in preparation for a cruise in foreign waters.

The regular weekly meeting of the Superintendents of the Poor was held yesterday, at Flatbush. The heads of departments made the following report: Almshouse—Present number of inmates, 76, increase, 13; Hospital—Present number of inmates, 196, increase, 8; Nursery—Present number of inmates, 432, increase, 8; Asylum—Present number of inmates, 624. General Store-keeper—Remaining in store on 1st inst., $1,733 94; received during the week, $10 83; total to date, $2,554 07.

Ten of the Prospect Park lots, on Vanderbilt-avenue, were sold, yesterday, at the auction-rooms of COLE & MURPHY. This action will bring up the question of title to 125 acres of land in the vicinity of Flatbush. Should the Supreme Court decide that the Commissioners have the power of transferring the title to it, the entire tract will be sold, but if the decision is adverse, the land will have to be incorporated in the Park.

No new facts in regard to the Central Bank have been ascertained since yesterday. The investigation of its affairs, however, still continues. Many of the depositors expressed dissatisfaction with the appointment of Mr. SPAEDER as receiver. He must, they say, have understood all about the state of the finances before the crash came.

JOHN GRUMLEY, the man who was arrested a few days ago on a charge of stealing $125 worth of clothing from his boarding-house, at No. 202 John-street, was discharged yesterday by Justice WALSH, there being no evidence to show that he committed the theft.

MARY BROWN, a resident of East Brooklyn, was arrested yesterday for kidnapping the child of CHARLES MCLAUGHLAN, of Jamaica, L. I. She had the child in her possession for two weeks.

LONG ISLAND.

The great fire which commenced in the woods near Speonk on Tuesday, has not been extinguished at latest accounts. Close inspections show the field burnt to have been at least 40,000 acres in extent. The fire yesterday was burning east and west from the original starting point. Wednesday night the Fire Department of Riverhead was called out to protect the place, but the wind changing saved it without any effort. Much of the territory burned over is worthless, especially that portion on the chain of hills running through the island. The district overrun is still smoldering and the roads impassable. A large part of the heavy timber is very valuable, at least worth $20 per acre. One man owning 250 acres had just refused $20 per acre for his timber. As there is no insurances on this species of property, the loss will fall heavily on the farmers. It cannot amount to less than $200,000.

At the meeting of the Common Council of Long Island City, yesterday, ten special Police constables for Sunday duty were appointed from each ward. Fifteen hundred dollars were appropriated by the Board to purchase badges for the Mayor, Aldermen, Police officers, &c. As the Mayor intends being absent for a few weeks, Alderman WILLIAMS was set apart to perform his duties during his absence. In the ordinances which were perfected, the one on ball-playing prohibits the playing of base-ball within the city limits on Sunday, under a penalty of $5 for each offense.

The ship Argonaut, whose spars and upper works were lately burnt at Jersey City, at the explosion of the gas metre on board the ferry-boat James Watt, was towed, yesterday, into the dock at Hunter's Point, where she will be repaired and placed in good condition.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY.

Quite an exciting event, which came near terminating somewhat seriously, occurred at Washingtonville, in the town of East Chester, on Wednesday afternoon. It appears that WILLIAM WATTS, the Pound-master, had impounded the cattle and geese of sundry residents of the neighborhood, and as it is alleged, had shown some favoritism to other violators of the pound laws. An army of German and Irish women, armed with all sorts of weapons, resolved to make war upon the Pound-master, on the occasion of his next visit among them. Under these circumstances Justice MEEKS, aided by Constables WOOD, FOSTER and WATTS, Police Constable TOMLINSON and Special Officers BERTINE and MYERHOFF, repaired to the public pound, and undertook to remove a post which had been put down to prevent the opening of the pound gate, when they were set upon by the infuriated women and driven off the field. The Amazons then tore down the inclosure amid shouts of victory. One of the resisting party claims to have a lease of the ground, which may save her from prosecution.

NEW-JERSEY.

For a long time a young man in Newark has been in the custom of borrowing money and soliciting it for charitable purposes, and of appropriating it, when obtained, to his own use. His name is CHARLES SEATON, and he lives with his parents at No. 17 Fair-street. Dr. GEORGE S. WARD, yesterday, complained of the young scamp for obtaining from him $6 to help a friend in trouble. It is an old game with the boy, and, after examination, he was committed to jail. Other complaints will, no doubt, be entered against him.

A young man called at a saloon in Newark, yesterday, and asked to have a $10 bill changed. The bill he presented was a counterfeit on the First National Bank of Poughkeepsie. He was arrested and taken before United States Commissioner WHITEHEAD, who committed him for trial in default of $5,000 bail. He gave his name as E. W. DAVIDSON, and said he resided at No. 240 Bleecker-street, New-York. A companion who was with him escaped to New-York.

The State rifle match of New-Jersey for the Major-General's Gold Medal will be held in October, probably at Newark. Many of the military are practicing for the occasion.

A well-known dry-goods dealer on Newark-avenue, in Jersey City, named JULIUS WEIL, closed up his establishment a few days ago, and has not been seen since. Before going he sent by a boy in his employ a note to his wife, telling her that she would hear from him again. He had become much involved in debt, owing to misfortune in business, and this fact is generally accepted as explaining his disappearance.

The injuries of Mrs. MARY MCCUE, who was so severely burned, on Tuesday, by the ignition of some oil which she was at the time pouring upon a fire, in her residence, in Jersey City, has resulted in her death. An inquest will be held by Coroner VOLHARDT.

The Union-street M. E. Church, of Newark, will make an excursion to New-Haven today on the steamer Magenta. Reinhardt's Band will accompany the excursion, and a dinner will be served on board.

JAMES P. COLE, a sewing-machine agent in Newark, left his house more than a week ago to go to New-York, since which time no trace of him can be obtained, though the New-York hospitals, the Morgue, and every conceivable place has been searched. He leaves in Newark a wife and child, and an aged father.

The members of Hiram Lodge F. and A. M., of Jersey City, held their annual picnic at Dudley's Grove, yesterday. A large party, numbering 800, accompanied them.

The insurance upon the property destroyed by fire in Newark on Wednesday night is $12,000, an amount fully sufficient to cover the losses. The insurances were effected mostly in Newark companies.

A new lodge of Odd Fellows has been instituted in Hoboken.
